ABOUT KOL HAMEVAKKER

Kol Hamevakker is the Jewish Thought magazine of the Yeshiva University student body, and the only Yeshiva University ty publication which doubles as a sleeping aid. The magazine hopes to facilitate the religious and intellectual growth of its "readership" and serves as a forum for students to express their views on a variety of issues that face the Jewish community (usually the ones you don't care about). It also provides opportunities for young thinkers to engage Judaism intellectually and creatively, and to mature into confident leaders, and/or find a shidduch.

Kol Hamevakker is published monthly and its primary contributors are undergraduates, although it (allegedly) includes input from RIETS Roshei Yeshivah, YU professors, and anyone else whose language is sufficiently confusing to warrant intellectual awe. In addition to its print magazine, Kol Hamevakker also sponsors special events, speakers, sneakers, discussion groups, conferences, and our own edition of the Webster dictionary.

We encourage anyone interested in writing about or discussing Jewish issues to get involved in our community, and to participate in the magazine, the conversation, and our club's events. Find us online at www.kolhamevaser.com, or on Facebook or Twitter.

R. Qlees says, "Who is 'naughty in my sight?' One who takes the Holy One's name in vain." R.Yones said to him, "Is it really so terrible to say jehovah? R. Olees said to him, "You are liable for stoning, for saying jehovah!" R. Yones responded, "Now you have said it too!" With that, a woman took a stone and threw it at R. Olees. A woman?! But is it not true that women are not obligated in stoning? Rather, what was the case? She dressed up as a man, and thus was not noticed.

After the death of R. Khapman,

R. Pelin went to learn with R. Qlees. R. Pelin said to him, "I would like learn with R. Khapman, he would raise twenty four objections to every statement I said." R. Qlees said to him, "He did not." R. Pelin said, "Is this an argument? It is but a contradiction!" R. Olees said to him, "Yes, it is." R. Pelin replied, argument is like Beit Shammai and Beit Hillel. What is a contradiction? today. A contradiction is like Korah and his followers." Said R. Qlees, "Is this so? But we see that Korah and his followers is called "argument!" Rather, "argument" and "contradiction" are the same. Before R. Pelin could respond, the guards at the house of study led him out, for he did not have the money to pay.

And now for something completely different. R. Ayydel said, "A man should always look on the bright side of life. For even when a sharp sword rests upon a man's neck, he should not desist from prayer." R Ayydel also said, "I hope that's a hopeful enough note to end this on."

I'm looking at you, Daniel.

The manuscript starts out with the full text of the chapter being discussed, and then goes on to interpret it.

Psalms 139:11-12.

This passage is clearly not meant to be taken literally, and should instead be seen as an allegory.

The word in the text is Arnevet, which, based on Megillah 9a, I have translated as the Greek name "Lagos," which also means "hare." This seems to make more sense than translating it as "hare" or "rabbit," as a "Killer Rabbit" i offensive to our logical sensibilities, and the great luminaries of the Talmud would never have believed in such nonsense. I mean, really, what is a rabbit going to do?

It appears this should read "three." This translation is unclear. Literally, it means "goblet," or "grail," so I have chosen to assume it is a term for drink, and that Mar Robin was thirsty.

The phrase "interrogation of an argument, for when I would Hispanians" appears to be some kind of idiom, whose meaning is lost to history, as is the meaning of the pillow jabbing ritual.

From this point on in the manuscript, the text seems to resemble Talmudic discussion much more than it resembles Midrash Halakhah, leading us to the obvious conclusion that the great Rabbis mentioned in this manuscript, though likely ignored and even castigated "Is it? What is an argument? An in their time, were actually the forerunners of the Talmudic style we know and love

This seems to run contrary to the official rabbinic position expressed in Sanhedrin 7:11, which is likely the reason for its exclusion from the rabbinic canon.
