Prof. Lowan Cited For Loran Project

Math Data Aided U.S. War Effort

Dr. Arnold N. Lowan, professor of physics at Yeshiva College, was recently awarded two government citations, one was presented by the United States Navy, and the other by the Office of Scientific Research and Development, for his outstanding work in directing the Mathematical Tables Project in its war work. The Mathematical Tables Project headed by Dr. Lowan, was organized in 1938 for the purpose of computing mathematical tables of importance to physicists, engineers, and other scientists.

The navy award was termed by Rear-Admiral G. F. Hussey as "the symbol of appreciation from the Bureau of Ordnance and from the entire United States Navy for your keen technical proficiency and expert supervision which you have constantly displayed"; and it congratulated Dr. Lowan for his "Outstanding performance in connections with the developments of new computational techniques for the solution of difficult mathematical problems dealing with shock-wave phenomena".

Tables and A Bomb

It was at a Science Club meeting last year that Dr. Lowan disclosed how the Mathematical Tables Project had devised tables for long range navigation known as "Loran", and the part his organization played in computing certain data for the uranium piles which produced the essential Plutonium for the atom bomb.

For his part in this and other vital work, the Office of Scientific Research Development headed by Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University and Dr. Vanevar Bush, of atom bomb fame, praised Dr. Lowan "for contributing to the successful prosecution of the second world war". Dr. Raymond Archibald, associate editor of Scripta Mathematica, recently reviewed Dr. Lowan's work in his article, "Mathematical Table Makers".

Benardete Speaks On Sephardic Past

The French Club of Yeshiva College was addressed on Wednesday, December 11, by Professor M. J. Benardete on the subject of Sephardic literature and culture. M. J. Benardete is at present a professor at Brooklyn College and director of Sephardic studies at the Hispanic Institute of Columbia University.

He discussed the Sephardic culture from the Fourth Century to the Inquisition and the lessons that it is possible for us to derive from it.

New Frosh Enter Y.C. In February

Dean Moses L. Isaacs has announced that plans are under way to admit approximately forty new freshmen for the 1947 spring semester. Admission is open only to those students who are registered in the Yeshiva or in the Teachers Institute of Yeshiva University.

The new students may register for sixteen credits per semester. The following courses will be offered: Chemistry 24, English 1, Fine Arts 2 and 6, French 1, Hebrew 1, History, Hygiene 1, Philosophy 56, Political Science 33, Sociology 33, Spanish 1, Speech 1. Registration for new students will take place from January 15 through January 20.

Prof. S. K. Mirsky Guest Speaker At St. Louis Meeting

During a recent trip through the middle west, Rabbi Samuel K. Mirsky, professor of Bible at Yeshiva College, addressed the conference of "The Associated Yeshivoh of St. Louis". This conference arranged through the auspices of the Mirachi's "Vaad Hachinuch Hacharedi", was attended by delegates from all the important Jewish communities of the area and planned an intensive educational program for the entire section.

Rabbi Mirsky's topic was "The Maximum Program of Jewish Education". Such a program cannot be attained without providing for a system of higher education, for all to aim at. By creating local educational centers and yeshivoh ketanoh the first step is completed. The ultimate goal of any individual seeking the maximum education is Yeshiva University.

St. Louis' Community

Discussing the communal structure of St. Louis, Rabbi Mirsky professed admiration for the "Vaad Hachinuch", which is composed of twenty-one synagogues and thirteen Talmud Torahs. Graduates of these schools may continue their studies at "Yeshivath Zecharia Joseph". Three years ago, a full time Yeshiva was opened. Mr. Sol Sugarman, a T.I. graduate is the school supervisor and plans for its expansion will be effected shortly.

Spanish Club

La Tortilla, the Spanish speaking club, will hold its next meeting on Wednesday, December 26, in the dormitory social hall. All Spanish students and members of La Orlinda are invited to attend. The meeting will start at 8:30.

Schwartz Keynoter At Birthday Dinner

O'Dwyer Praises Y.U.'s Progress

Twelve hundred persons, joined Jan Masaryk, Czechoslovakian foreign minister and Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz at the Hotel Astor on Thursday evening, December 11, in celebrating Yeshiva University's first birthday.

The dinner, which was attended by leading educators, religious and communal figures, heard Dr. Schwartz, an eminent alumnus of Yeshiva, describe from first-hand experience, the tragic fate of European Jewry. "The support of Yeshiva University is a must, if Jewry is to recover from the calamity which has befallen our brethren in Europe. Only by training intelligent Jewish leaders, as Yeshiva is doing, can we hope to speed the spiritual and cultural reconstruction of European Jewry," Dr. Schwartz said.

O'Dwyer Sends Message

In a short message, Mayor O'Dwyer expressed the city's acknowledgment of the fine and enterprising achievements of Yeshiva University. Mr. O'Dwyer stressed Yeshiva's importance not only to New York but to the entire nation. "Yeshiva is destined for high rank among our great institutions of learning," he added. "Any university with such a mission as yours, is a real American institution which will play a powerful part in keeping our nation within the democratic plan laid down by our Founding Fathers," he declared.

The Mayor congratulated Yeshiva University on the progress it has made, which has won for it, from the State Board of Regents, the right to confer six additional higher degrees and to establish new graduate and undergraduate schools.

Honorary Dinner Demand

Samuel Hausman, an outstanding leader in Jewish communal and civic affairs and president of the United Palestine Appeal of New York, presided at the dinner. He urged the wholehearted support of Yeshiva University's expansion campaign for $7,000,000, asserting, "As the one college and university in this country sponsored by Jews, Yeshiva University should claim the full-hearted help of every American Jew."

Honorary chairman of the dinner were: Dr. Samuel Belkin, president, Yeshiva University; Nathaniel Goldstein, Attorney-General of New York State; Samuel Levy, chairman, Board of Directors, Yeshiva University; Lazarus Joseph, Comptroller of New York City; and Supreme Court Justice Philip M. Kleinfield.

Dr. A. Margalith's New Book Traces U.S. Aid To Jews

A new volume was recently added to the list of books of particular interest to Jews with the release of Dr. Aaron Margalith's "With Firmness in the Right—American Diplomatic Action Affecting Jews, 1940-1945". Written in collaboration with Dr. Cyrus Adler, this book traces in scholarly fashion the diplomatic correspondence of the United States during the last century which has any bearing on the Jewish people. Dr. Margalith is associate professor of political science at Yeshiva College and librarian of the Y.C. library.

The book is intended to correct the erroneous notion that intercession by the United States on behalf of the Jewish people is a departure from the diplomatic precedents of the State Department.

The first attempt at organizing and publishing this diplomatic correspondence was made by Dr. Adler in a monograph penned in 1905. In 1935, Dr. Adler asked Dr. Margalith to collaborate with him on a revision of the earlier attempt. The book resulting from their joint labor appeared in 1943 as Volume 26 of "Publications", issued by the American Jewish Historical Society, under the title of "American Intercession on Behalf of Jews in the Diplomatic Correspondence of the United States, 1840-1935". Dr. Margalith's new book is a further revision of this volume, with several new features including the addition of a new introductory chapter and a concluding chapter, bringing the book up to date. It is published by the American Jewish Committee, and the first edition has already been sold out.

Good Neighbor Policy

On Thursday morning, December 12, Yeshiva students on their way to school found themselves stopped by police blockades all along their path. On the surface, they could see nothing wrong. But more than fifty men, women, and children were buried under the debris of 2515 Amsterdam Avenue, a tenement building just one block away.

Upon learning of the disaster, President Belkin immediately contacted the authorities and placed the school's facilities at the disposal of the Welfare Department and the Red Cross. Temporary dormitories for the disaster victims were set up, and arrangements made with the school cafeteria to provide meals for all that needed them. The Commentator is proud to relate that the institution had offered even more of its resources which, fortunately, were not required. It is with great pride that the student body compliments Dr. Belkin and the administration of Yeshiva University for a job well done, both in the spirit of the Jewish heritage and in the best traditions of Americanism.

Philosophy Again

During the past three or four years, it has become a tradition with "Commentator" editors to devote one editorial to calling for the reinstatement of philosophy as a required course for a B.A. degree. This year, it is the sad duty of the editor to add a history course to that demand.

There was a time when the educational pattern, in a magnanimous spirit of liberalism, made it fashionable for a college to make as many courses as possible optional. Yeshiva, fortunately, restricted that trend until 1943 when philosophy was removed from the required list. More recently, an option was granted to the individual student to choose between history and mathematics.

Finally, about two years ago, the Harvard Report pointed out the futility and dangers of this course of action. The committee outlined a plan of education designed to coordinate the social with the physical sciences. The coordinating factors were the humanities. In Yeshiva College, the courses which traditionally bridged the gap and acted as "synthesizers" were history, and particularly, philosophy.

Prominent members of the alumni joined the student body in pointing out that it was almost inconceivable for an institution whose primary purpose is to prepare rabbis and leaders for the American Jewish community, to make philosophy optional. But while the social sciences were being made optional, and while changes were made in language requirements, the iron-clad rule of one year of science remained untouched.

Now we do not mean to imply that the science requirements be changed. But we do ask why, if other fields were made less restricted, the science requirements remained unchanged? Are we to "synthesize" chemistry and Baba Kama or the best of western culture with the Jewish tradition? Are we to blend ketones with Maimonides' "Guide" or critically compare Plato with Ibn Gabriol?

The only logical answer for the faculty's Curriculum Committee would be to completely overhaul next year's program, and design it to strike a proper balance between the social sciences, the natural sciences, and the humanities.

Progress in Gym

About six weeks ago, the sports page of this newspaper carried the glad tidings regarding improvements in the school gymnasium. At that time it was only possible to give a half-hearted "thanks" to the administration, for the equipment had been neglected and was in imminent danger of breaking.

The situation at the present time is fortunately quite different. Besides a varnished floor and a painted ceiling, all the faulty equipment has been removed and in its place shiny, new tools for the athletes can be seen. Our gym has been transformed from a drab, dirty cellar into an immaculate well-lighted work-house, resulting in increased attendance in P.T. classes and mass student participation in athletics.

Therefore, the entire student body may now offer sincere and unreserved gratitude to Dr. Belkin and Dean Isaacs. As has been pointed out, perhaps this is indicative of a change of policy on the part of the administration and if it is, we the students welcome it heartily. M.F.

Editorial Notebook

Yeshiva University recently celebrated its first birthday. Although outwardly there is but little visible change, the administration is hard at work attempting to carry out the additions to the institution as outlined in the charter. Since the war's end the need for a Jewish university has become more acute. The American Jewish community could land a smashing blow on anti-Semitism's jaw by supporting the American Jewish university being planned around the first—and still the only Jewish college in the diaspora.

Although 1947 is still some six days away, and the Republicans not yet in power, a preview of things to come was the release of the Meader Report by the Republican minority of the Kilgore Committee.

As was pointed out by PM and those other few honest papers still surviving, Mr. Meader never visited the D.P. camps and spoke mostly to officers known for their hostility to the D.P.s and their hatred of Jewish and Negro soldiers.

The Republican minority, including Senator Owen Brewster, darling of certain Zionist leaders, released this report, in spite of the fact that they were aware of its unfairness, and in spite of the fact that they must have known that American fascism would capitalize upon it at the expense of the Jewish and Negro minorities.

To those reactionary Zionists and Revisionists who supported the Republicans and opposed men like Kilgore, we ask, "Had enough?"

Maybe I'm Wrong

Expansion Begins At Home, Recognition Is Imperative

by William Herakowitz

Since Yeshiva became a university, all we've been hearing is news of expansion. At every banquet, dinner, or tea held for "the only Jewish university in the Americas", another building or department has been proposed. It was only a few weeks ago that the Yeshiva students were set buzzing by the news that we had purchased the lot across the street.

Don't get me wrong, expansion is a very good thing, if you are ready to expand. However, before we allow our enthusiasm over the proposed changes to overwhelm us we should remember that a building is only as good as its foundation. The basic part of any university is its undergraduate school. Why start expanding when our college is not as good as it should be?

How About Some Recognition?

Just two weeks ago, there were two letters on the fourth floor bulletin board, one from The Association of American Universities and the other from The Middle States Association of Colleges, stating that Yeshiva has not even applied for recognition by them. It is a little strange when a college doesn't desire such recognition but it is entirely incomprehensible for a university not even to attempt to attain such recognition. Every member of such an organization will recognize the degrees given by another member school for graduate school study while they may not accept those from a non-member college. Membership in one of these associations means nation-wide recognition. The students who work hard for their degrees expect to have them recognized on an equal basis with those issued by other schools. Even if the school itself doesn't care to be listed (which I don't believe is the case), it should try to be rated for the benefit of its students. We became a university a year ago and still haven't contacted either of the above mentioned associations. How about spending three cents out of our five million dollar expansion fund to find out how and when we can be recognized?

Part of the expansion program calls for graduate courses in psychology. As a "psych" major, I have to applaud the officials for attempting to arrange for a graduate degree in this field, but as a college student I have to bitterly bewail the fact that I will have to attend the Brooklyn College evening session in order to take a course in Experimental Psychology which is required for my B.A. Why couldn't Yeshiva have a well-equipped laboratory and offer this necessary subject itself?

Humanities Not Required

Almost all of the colleges in New York require that every candidate for a liberal arts degree take at least one course in humanities. One would expect that in a school where approximately 90% of the graduates are liberal arts majors that such a course should be required. Why don't we expand our curriculum to include this basic course?

I am very proud of the fact that our library is expanding at the rate of three hundred new books per week. This increased coverage will undoubtedly aid the students in their school work. However, what good are the books when the library facilities aren't always available when needed. Why doesn't Yeshiva hire a full time librarian to keep the college library open on Sundays and Fridays as well as the rest of the week?

Letters To The Editor

The author of this letter will receive a carton of Chesterfield cigarettes, obtained through the courtesy of Solomon Shoulson, campus representative of the Chesterfield company.

Dear Editor,

When the much-heralded news of our becoming a university was finally announced, optimistic students began to look forward to expanded post-graduate facilities at Yeshiva. But it seems that they will have to keep on looking forward for a long time to come. It is obvious that the administration feels obliged to rest for several years before taking the next logical step. This is in conformity with the old rule that orthodox leaders must not display too much foresight, lest even at this late hour orthodoxy may yet regain its lost American following.

But why must this be so? Why must our college students transfer to other institutions for their graduate degrees? We have most of the men, and certainly we can attract others, to establish immediately graduate departments in at least psychology, education, and sociology. If we do not take this project seriously and do not plan for it now, such facilities will not be ready by next September, and that means that more Yeshiva students will be lost to outside universities.

The new land should be used for making these graduate courses available as soon as possible.

Punsters' Notes

by Ish Keven

CHUG IVRI. One "lets", when asked if he believed in clubs for Yeshiva boys, replied, "Yes, when every other form of persuasion fails". Seriously, however, Chug Ivri is doing a wonderful job. This "Chug Ivri Button" idea is already successful in getting the fellows to converse in Hebrew. Yours truly loves Hebrew. He could sit and listen to it for hours.

SYMPOSIUM. The recent Jewish Affairs Symposium was the greatest event in Yeshiva since Reiss knows when. Natanyahu claimed sole possession of the Truth, Porush insisted that only Agudists were Orthodox and Greenberg forgot about his blood-pressure while slamming his mind in Porush's face. In the question-and-answer period, the three honorable gentlemen stretched their allotted two minutes to whenever Louis Bernstein stopped them. They spoke like soap-box orators working themselves up into a lather. During the pro and confusion, a very interesting Battle of Ma'amorim took place between Rabbim Porush and Mr. Greenberg. Both lost and all were confused.

EXPLANATION. The fact that so many rabbis are poor can be explained by the fact that there are so many poor rabbis.

CLEANLINESS. Cleanliness may be next to Godliness, but in Yeshiva it's next to impossible. It seems that every attempt to induce cleanliness here has been a greater flop than Empty Damp-ty. How can we wash in our washrooms when our washrooms are never washed?

Yeshiva Wins In Opener; Drill Dentists

by Herbert Fredman

The Mites successfully opened the '46-'47 basketball season by trouncing N.Y.U. Dentistry 60-42, on December 7th in the Central High School for Needle Trades gymnasium. The Dentists took advantage of the lethargic play of the Yeshiva basketballers in the opening stanza to gain a half-time lead of 20-18. In the third period, however, the fast breaking offense of Yeshiva began to click and the "Yanks" rapidly decayed.

Captain Marv Fredman looked somewhat apathetic in his play under the boards in the first half, but after Sarachek's poignant remarks during the intermission he became his usually aggressive self and wound up the evening with 28 points to his credit. Lefty Hyatt proved to be a pleasant surprise, puffing his cheeks and set-shooting his way to 14 points. The victory can be attributed to teamwork, however, rather than the individual play of one or two members of the squad.

Fredman Rolls

For the first four minutes the Blue and White were unable to break the ice, while the Dentists had no trouble finding cavities in the Sarachekian defenses and succeeded in racking up seven straight points. Fredman and Hyatt enabled Yeshiva to break into the scoring column for the first time.

The second quarter was featured by a collaborated effort which gave Yeshiva a temporary lead. Trailing in the third stanza despite the scoring efforts of Irv Weisel and Denny Geller a fortunate thing took place. Fredman's glasses were broken and this aroused the giant's "Irish", so that he went on to score 9 straight points.

Abrams Breaks Nose

The victory could not be completely enjoyed as Jerry Abrams was forced to retire to the sidelines during the first few minutes of play with a broken nose.

Marv Fredman, high scoring center, reaches for a high one in the Queens encounter. Geller (12) can also be seen in the foreground.

Hofstra Outlasts Weary Y.C. Quintet

Hofstra College was forced to utilize all three of its teams before they were able to subdue a spirited Yeshiva quintet 58-39 on their home hardwood. The score of the third successive failure of the Quinthooplets, fails to indicate that the Hempsteaders only forged ahead in the last two minutes of play when the men of the Blue and White became exhausted from running up and down the oversized court.

Denny Geller and Chiel Simon led the play making and floor play in the first half which ended with Hofstra on the long end of a 29-21 count. The third and fourth stanzas were featured by Irv Weisel's set-shooting, and Marv Fredman's pivoting from the bucket. Weisel scored 10 points and Fredman racked up 17 to be high scorer for the eve.

Cathedral Game

On Wednesday night, January 8th, the Quinthooplets of Yeshiva College, will face Cathedral College at the Cardinal Hayes Gymnasium, Bronx. The Mites will be out to avenge last years twin drubbings by the Bronxites.

Hoopsters Beaten By Queens Five

Despite the frantic cries of the cheerleaders to the tune of "Gimmel, dadd, they're really solid," the team played like "squares from Delaware" and went down to defeat at the hands of Queens, 51-42. The "Red" men allowed the Blue and Gray to pile up a 32-26 advantage at the three-quarter mark and then pulled to within 5 points of their high flying opponents, only to falter and fall further behind in the remaining three minutes of play.

The defeat can be blamed on their lack of prowess under the boards which made it possible for their opponents to retain possession of the ball. A good indication of this is the fact that the Mites scored but two field goals in the entire first half.

Another factor responsible for their setback was the serious lack of a good set-shot artist. This made itself painfully evident in the closing minutes of the game when the Mites tried in vain to register with long range popping.

Rally Fails As BCP Wins In Last Seconds

Alone from game to game you'll find Yeshiva's Perry Como, their star captain, Marv Fredman, Atlas-like carrying the weight of the team on his shoulders. So it was December 21st when Yeshiva's hoopsters went down to a heart-breaking 42-40 defeat at the hands of the Brown and White clad cage artists of the Brooklyn College of Pharmacy at the latter's gymnasium. The lanky center dropped in a total of 27 points. Seventeen of these came in the first half to account for all but one of Yeshiva's pre-half time tallies. Aside from Fredman, only "Iszy" Hyatt and Denny Geller acquitted themselves creditably, scoring 6 and 5 points respectively.

The game was a tough one to lose since the Mites had gained a 34-31 lead after trailing all the way. This advantage was short-lived however, and the Pharmacy five regained the drivers seat and staved off a desperate Yeshiva bid for victory in the closing seconds of play.

Panzer Beats Yeshiva

The room trappings came hurtling down on Yeshiva cage aggregation as the Mites bowed to Panzer's divisions, 77-35 on Tuesday, December 10th, in the victor's balliwicks.

The Panzer "contest" can be attributed to an overwhelming superiority on the part of the Panzer, hoop and dribble quintet.

The cannonsding of the Maroon's Trocetti, who amassed 17 counters, elevated him to the top-scoring niche for the winners.

Dr. Braun Speaks At Eranos Meeting

On Monday evening, Dec. 2, the Classical Society held its first meeting of the term. Dr. Sidney Braun, assistant professor of French, lectured about the relationship between French literature and the classical languages. He gave us a brief survey of French literature, during which he showed how the various French writers were influenced by the works of the great Roman and Greek intellects. Dr. Braun concluded by saying that classical languages are of enormous importance today since, either consciously or unconsciously, we are all influenced by classical culture.
