Host to ten colleges, one coming all the way from St. Louis, Yeshiva University held its tenth annual debate tournament at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, Sunday, May 6.

After three rounds of debating, Hunter College's negative team defeated the affirmative team of City College for the championship. Judging this round, which was held in the auditorium before all the teams and coaches, were Dr. David Fleisher, chairman of the English department at Yeshiva; Martin Greene, chairman of the State Labor Relations Board; and Edward Swell, prominent New York attorney.

The tournament was the first project under the management of the society's new officers. In the election held April 12, Ray Bloch '63 was voted to the presidency. The other officers are: Nathan Dembin '63, vice-president; Shepard Melzer '64, secretary; Mitchell Wolf '64, campus manager; and David Levine '63, tournament director.

The new staff will be assisted during the coming year by Mr. Henry Grinberg, who will coach the team while Dr. David Fleisher is on leave.

Next Sunday night the team will have its annual dinner together with the Dean and faculty advisers. The evening, which is set aside for reminiscence, will cap a year during which eight members, in the short space of a week, travelled 16,000 miles and debated 23 colleges on four separate tours.

Only one newspaper in the 501-1000 enrollment category received the highest standing or All-American award with a combined total of 3300 points.

Well Balanced Coverage

The A.C.P. commented on the creative job done on feature stories and the "well balanced" coverage of campus and world affairs reflected in editorials. Also commended was news coverage which was said to be "very much in contact with all groups on campus."

David Segal '62, editor-in-chief of THE COMMENTATOR, remarked, "Even if we had won the top award, I consider recognition from the student body for our coverage of Soviet anti-Semitism, of Cuban and French affairs, more important than a pat on the back from the ACP for our "artistic" headlines and "stylish" layout."

of Colorado, San Francisco, and Southern California and the Air Force Academy.

David Levine '63 and Shepard Melzer '64 travelled to New England where they held two no-decision debates against Tufts and Boston College and lost to Harvard but returned to New York to whip West Point. In the south, Mel Granatstein '62 and David Epstein '63 trounced the University of Richmond, lost to U. of South Carolina, Oglethorpe, and Morehouse of Atlanta and Florida State, with no-decision at Johns Hopkins. The overall record was 9-11-3 and, with most members returning, the outlook for next year is promising.

Pre-Med Preference Drops In Poll Of Student Majors

Majoring in premedical and predoctoral studies are 102 students or 16.9% of the 638 currently enrolled at Yeshiva College, reported Professor Morris Silverman, registrar.

The statistics for other popular fields are: mathematics, 13.1%; history, 10.6%; chemistry, 9.6%; psychology, 8.0%; English 7.6%; political science, 6.3%, and physics, 5.0%.

Only the pre-med statistics depart from data of previous years. In 1955 and 1954 pre-med represented 8.6% and 11.4% of the class, respectively. In 1955, the year Albert Einstein College of Medicine admitted its first class, the figures rose to 22.2%. During the following six years, pre-med majors constituted an average of 25.5% of all students, as compared to 16.9% today.

Faculty Shifting Position On Policy Towards Cuts

Reduction in credit rather than a lowering of grades will be part of the new cut system at Yeshiva, THE COMMENTATOR learned from administrative sources.

The new system, as voted by the faculty, also provides for unlimited cuts for anyone receiving an A in a course unless the professor concerned vetoes such a plan at the beginning of the term.

The Scholastic Standing Committee, with Professor Henry Lisman as chairman and Dr. Seymour Lainoff executive secretary, had suggested at a faculty meeting that students on the Dean's List should be permitted unlimited cuts, again only upon the agreement of the professor. One of the faculty offered even another suggestion, stating that an unlimited cuts program should be initiated for all students. Both of these plans were voted down by the faculty.

"A" Students Exempted

Previous policy concerning absences from lectures, as stated by Dr. Irving Greenberg, former executive secretary of the Scholastic Standing Committee, provided for unlimited cuts to students who none-the-less received an "A" in a particular course, without the possibility of a veto from the professor. All other students were penalized a grade if overcut in a class.

THE COMMENTATOR had editorialized in the past about the cut system at Yeshiva, saying that with the capable faculty we have here, there should be no need to force attendance upon a student by threatening a reduction in grades. THE COMMENTATOR had noted, "An individual who fails to attend a course is immediately pe-

Council Elections

Elections for school and class officers will be held Monday, May 14 on the fourth floor of the main building.

In the preferential style of balloting used at Yeshiva, the voter will mark his first, second, and, if necessary, third choices for each Student Council office as well as for his class candidates. The candidates for each position who receive the lowest number of votes will be eliminated and their second place ballots will be distributed among the remaining candidates, assuring a majority. The only qualification for voting is that a student present his bursar's card as identification.

Candidates will speak at the election assembly May 10 in room 404.

This is one of a series of programs sponsored by the Alumni Association in conjunction with the Student Council and Rabbi Edward Diamond, director of guidance.

The biological and chemical sciences will be discussed on May 10 at a seminar with Dr. Fred Goodman, assistant professor of biology at Stern College, and Dr. Alvin Basch, senior chemist for the Scheering Corp.

On Tuesday, May 15, law, accounting, and public relations will be the subjects of the last seminar. Mr. Sheldon Rudoff, prominent attorney, Mr. Eleazer Humes, CPA, and Mr. Sam Hartstein, director of public relations at Yeshiva, will preside.

bers of the Scholastic Standing Committee, the hope for a revamped cuts policy had been mutual. It had been agreed upon that a new system should bring this educational community to a more mature attitude toward lectures and absences. Rather than being an improvement on the past, the student leaders are convinced that the faculty has instituted a regressive plan.

It is still uncertain when the new policy will be enforced since Dean Isaac Bacon refused to make any official statement.

Tobias Berman '62, president of the Yeshiva College Student Council stated, "The faculty must realize the implications of its action and reverse its decision before next term."

Zoning Spurs Race Problem

A symposium on the "Progress and Problems of Northern Desegregation" was held at Yeshiva University's Graduate School of Education, Sunday April 29. Stanley Lowell, chairman of the New York City Commission on Human Rights, chaired the symposium.

Among those participating were Will Maslow, executive director of the American Jewish Congress; Kenneth B. Clark, professor of psychology at City University of New York; Francis A. Turner, assistant superintendent of schools; and Daniel Schreiber, director of the National Education Association's School Dropout Project.

Mr. Lowell informed the conference that despite the Open Enrollment Program, elementary schools in which Negro-Puerto Rican registration exceeds 90 percent have almost doubled in size during the last five years. This problem stems from zoning restrictions in the city, which have resulted in certain neighborhood schools being almost completely filled with Negro or Puerto Rican children. The New York Post, in an editorial on May 1, used this fact to emphasize the difficult desegregation situation in New York City.

Mr. Maslow noted that "unless New York City redoubles its efforts, segregation and retardation will grow worse, not better." As a possible remedy to the city's desegregation problem, he suggested that the 86,000 Negro and Puerto Rican children who are now on part-time schedules be sent to less crowded schools in different vicinities.

The symposium was part of Yeshiva's year-long Diamond Jubilee observance.

Desperate Decision

THE COMMENTATOR has long believed in a liberal cut system at Yeshiva. A college student should not be coddled by an institution which keeps a check on his absences; he must be able to estimate the value of a course himself. By forcing its students to attend classes, with reduction of grades as penalty for excessive absences, Yeshiva is doing more harm than good.

A plan was submitted to the faculty by the Scholastic Standing Committee whereby honors students would be allowed unlimited absences. Although this was a far-from-giant step forward, the plan at least improved upon the present cut policy. Apparently the faculty did not consider the plan timid enough, for it voted the new idea down.

The faculty's rejection of this plan may indicate that our instructors feel their courses are not stimulating enough to attract students; they must be forced to attend. Courses would perhaps require improvement if a professor desired the students' attendance. The good instructor need not read his rollbook every day if his course is interesting. He can be assured a full class.

THE COMMENTATOR deplores the faculty's narrow-mindedness as regards the present cut system. When the instructor at Yeshiva begins to trust his own drawing power, and stops using forced attendance as a crutch, a liberalized cut system will be forthcoming.

Demonstration Digression

Before Passover approximately one thousand Jewish youths picketed the Soviet mission to the U.N. The announced object of this demonstration was to demand of the Russian government a reversal of policy forbidding the making of matzoh in state bakeries. In this respect the demonstration was unsuccessful.

But for a short time last month Jewish youth of New York City were united and powerful — powerful in that they were able to show the world that everything was not fine for Soviet Jewry.

In planning the demonstration, the Jewish Youth Emergency Committee discussed the possibility of repercussions against Soviet Jewry. Many recognized experts on the subject were consulted and it was decided that even though there was a very slim possibility of Soviet action toward the Jews, the odds against it were 1000-1.

The fact that adult leaders of many Jewish organizations had publicly protested. Soviet anti-Semitism without repercussion also influenced the Committee.

While covering all aspects of this action, the Governing Board learned much about Russian Jewry and the Soviet government, but more important now is that we discovered some interesting aspects of the American Jewish community.

For the first time we can remember, American Jewish youth, or for that matter American Jews in general, strove for a goal without searching for individual recognition. We are familiar with the sight of one or two groups sponsoring a dinner or affair or supporting a cause, but it usually seems that they are first seeking to promote the organization's name and second attempting to accomplish their proclaimed goal.

We believe that this is probably the major stumbling block before the Jewish community in achieving its religious, social, cultural, and communal goals.

Groups must join together where they can, and act with combined strength without regard for praise, but with concentration towards goals.

Because it is unlikely that all organizations will unite under one banner immediately after reading this editorial, we suggest that the YCSC take the initiative.

The president we elect next week should personally urge the new council to take upon itself the responsibility of uniting the Jewish youth of the nation.

It should invite the leaders of Yavneh, Young Israel, SZO, Mizrachi Hatzair, and all other youth organizations to a discussion of the possibilities of unity on specific issues. An organization must be formed to bind together the youth of America.

We, as the future leaders of American Jewry, must be concerned not only with Judaism at Yeshiva but with Judaism in the nation and the world.

Leadership is a grave responsibility and today's youth must improve upon the type offered by the present generation.

Dapper Design

Having anticipated for two years the completion of the new college building, the Yeshiva student body must be wondering if perhaps the whole undertaking should be dissolved. Let us return to the familiar hole in the ground and give it another try.

This past week, students at Columbia University protested against what they termed "dull and ugly academic buildings planned for their campus." Yeshiva students, who are treated to a new academic building once in twenty-five years, may not know the difference, but upon careful inspection of the new white on white rectangular box with rows and rows of naked windows, the least discerning eye will be offended.

We realize that Yeshiva cannot squander money on lavish design. It must be realized, however, that this is our campus which will remain and be perpetuated for a long time to come. A master plan should be devised which will harmoniously blend various buildings as they are eventually constructed. Careful planning could result in a campus that we will be proud of, not an ignominious scattering of buildings that are haphazardly erected when enough money is scraped together.

"How To Succeed" Found Entertaining And Amusing With Fine Acting Ability

by Steven Kleinman

How to Succeed In Business Without Really Trying, winner of seven Antoinette Perry awards, is an amusing, witty, and enjoyable musical comedy based upon life in big business.

The plot is not too deep but one's attention is retained throughout the entire show. Based on the book by Shepherd Mead, How To Succeed is the story of J. Pierpont Finch (Robert Morse), a window washer who decides to enter big business by following simple rules set down in a book by the same title. Upon entering the firm of World Wide Wickets, Finch encounters the president, J. B. Biggley (Rudy Vallee) by accidentally bumping into him and knocking him down. Mr. Biggley directs him to the personnel office where he meets Mr. Bratt (Paul Reed), head of personnel, and states that he just "ran into" the boss, and is immediately given a job in the mail room.

Scene from Broadway Show "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying."

While delivering mail one day, Finch meets Rosemary, (Bonnie Scott), a private secretary who falls in love with him and starts making plans for their life in New Rochelle. As time passes, Finch is offered a job as head of the mail room, but is cunning enough to decline the position, stating that Frump (Charles Nelson Reilly), the boss' nephew, is more qualified for the job. Soon after, he is promoted to an executive position, followed by a promotion to Vice President in charge of Advertising.

Playing With Toys
J. B. Biggley is silently "entertaining" Hedy (Virginia Martin), a voluptuous secretary in the stenography pool. At the same time, Bratt and Frump are also making advances at her but are reprimanded by the other secretaries (A Secretary is Not A Toy). Finch is given the arduous task of raising sales at World Wide Wickets. He decides to sponsor a Pirate Quiz Show and has it approved by Biggley. Hedy is chosen to be the Treasure Chest Girl. The show proves to be a fiasco when Hedy forgets her lines and tries to ad-lib, giving the impression of a rigging.

The following day the entire executive staff is summoned by Mr. Toynebee, Chairman of the and travel with Hedy; and to make Finch Chairman of the Board.

No Megaphone

Rudy Vallee, back on Broadway after many years, portrays the aging but vigorous J. B. Biggley very well. His voice still carries though he does not use a megaphone, as he did in the past.

Although the music did not attain great heights, the lyrics surpassed those of any other show in recent years. For an evening of laughter and top notch entertainment, your reviewer strongly suggests seeing How To Succeed.

Letter to the Editor:

Ben-Ami Correction

To the Editor:
Please be informed of the joy I had when I spoke to the students of Yeshiva College. It brought back pleasant memories to me. I attended the Yeshiva about forty years ago on Montgomery Street in N.Y.C.

Thank you for the space you have given to me in your newspaper. I would like to correct a terrible error in that report.

I never said that Ben Gurion was the leader of the underworld. I stated that he was the real head of the Haganah that collaborated with the British. They were informers for the enemy and through them, many were arrested and killed. Abraham Stern was the first victim of the Haganah informers.

Thank you again for your kindness.

I hope you will publish this letter in the next issue of your newspaper. I am Yours, for the freedom of the Judean Nation in the historic Eretz-Yisroel.

Statements Of Presidential Candidates

by Joseph Rapaport

Once again, student and atmospheric temperatures are rising with the advent of summer and student elections. The latter is a yearly phenomenon which includes secretive political discussions, clappings on backs, handshakes, and interesting rivalries and reactions. Not to be neglected are the rosy promises which, having been discarded by the candidates of the previous year, make convincing prose.

Also in appearance at this time of year is the relatively egoistical article by the candidate for Student Council President in the pages of THE COMMENTATOR. Not wishing to break with tradition, and being as much a megalomaniac as the next guy, I would like to state my reasons for being so bold as to run for so high an office. Please bear with me therefore, as I attempt to state my past qualifications and my platform for the future.

My knowledge of the inner workings of Student Council began in my freshman year, when I was fortunate enough to have been elected class president. The opportunity to serve my class as an officer and my council as a representative provided me with much-needed experience for which I remain grateful.

On Executive Council

This year I served on the Executive Council in the capacity of secretary-treasurer. This position, more than any other, offered me the chance to become acquainted with the intricacies of Council.

A president must be prepared to work, and my efforts on Council this year should be ample testimony of my willingness to serve. I served on many committees, including the all-important Alumni-Student-Faculty group, the Co-op Investigating Committee, and (although this phrase has been overworked) on others too numerous to mention.

As a member of the chess and wrestling teams for the last three years, I am aware of the need for extra-curricular participation on the part of the student body.

Joseph Rapaport

A student council that is valid must not fade in the backstretch. The enthusiasm rampant in late spring and early fall is too often spent when problems and crises arise in the later stages of the year. The president's prime function, superseding his duties as student liaison man to the administration, is to continually fan the interest and motivation for student participation in Council activities. A constant diet of planned programs must be on tap as well as a concerted effort to improve upon the scholastic and physical facilities.

Must Resolve Co-op

Evening lectures and movies should be thoughtfully spaced rather than accumulated within short periods of time which often coincide with heavy work schedules. Clubs and societies must be encouraged to provide more stimulating programs than in the past. The problems of the Co-op, which have been ignored or gingerly avoided too long, must be finally and conclusively resolved.

Athletic competition, intercollegiate and intramural, should be actively backed and encouraged by Council. Student committees should be active in working hand-in-hand with the dean and faculty in conceiving possible additions and improvements in the college curriculum. It is the final responsibility of the students, as has been demonstrated in the past, to assure themselves a rich and beneficial program in the morning religious divisions.

I feel that you will come to the conclusion that Council needs Joe Rapaport for President.

Raffle '61; Where Are You? Pub. Relations Corners Market

by Alan Shapiro

Not overly long ago, overcome by a recent issue of "Better Homes and Gardens" discovered while waiting in a dentist's office, your reporter resolved to undertake the cleaning of his desk. Several hours later, upon returning to his room, his enthusiasm had not abated. Diligently he began wading through the mounds of old school newspapers, term papers, book reports, and other assorted trash which filled his desk drawer way beyond its intended capacity.

In time his eyes rested upon one small piece of paper — a raffle ticket for a clock radio. This writer realized that this raffle ticket — purchased for twenty-five cents from the Yeshiva University Athletic Association over a year ago in a rare burst of school spirit — was for a raffle he did not remember ever occurring. He pondered a moment and then was sure that the winner of this raffle had never been announced.

This writer's righteous indignation — then in a temporary state of mild dormancy — was immediately aroused. Grasping the raffle firmly in his left hand, your reporter stormed into Bernard Sarachek's gym, dodged between the legs of a practicing basketball team, and proclaiming himself a COMMENTATOR-sent truth seeker, demanded to know who had won the raffle (a sneaky way of asking whether there had been a drawing or not).

The phrase, a mild understatement, does not begin to convey how judiciously your reporter is Yeshiva University, at this our 75th anniversary, is reformulating its goals and plans for the future. We the students stand in a similar position and must, in the selection of Student Council leaders, bear in mind the goal we want to be obtained. We must realize the significance of the forthcoming election as it determines the future.

We must make a clean break from the previous Council administration and begin next year with a resurgence of effort, vitality, and innovation. We need a leader with the goal of school improvement in mind, one that approaches issues objectively and with freshness, not one nurtured by the past. What is needed is bold, rational innovation.

I will channel and concert all my effort to raise and improve the intellectual and cultural achievement of our school.

To do so, the first requisite is the unification and promotion of solidarity between the College and the Hebrew divisions. The cleavage caused by cliques and rivalry among councils must be reduced to allow for smooth, unified, purposeful, functioning.

choosing his words in calling Mr. Sarachek's response slightly angry. Resisting all natural desires to answer Mr. Sarachek's biting vituperative with an appropriate straight right jab to his stomach, we listened to one of the strongest diatribes we have ever heard directed against the un-extra-curricularly-oriented Yeshiva student.

Comparatively few students bought raffle tickets; still fewer tried to push the raffle. After a very inauspicious start, it was allowed to die quickly, quietly, and painlessly — except to those intimately involved. Most of us had even forgotten that it was in progress.

What had happened? I searched and searched but to no avail. What was wrong?

Fortunately a guiding light then beamed on your reporter. Quoth he,

"Oh Assistant Feature Editor mine,

Seekest thou in Yeshiva something fine

Try Public Relations, Public Relations."

And thanks to my muse, our story has an end. You see, unknown to the student body, this raffle was all a stunt of the Public Relations Department. In 73 years from now they intend to celebrate the Diamond Jubilee of a Raffle-Never-Held and award an antique clock radio to the oldest living raffle-ticket-holder. For the raffle is in progress, and bowing to their superior wisdom let us chant in unison, progress is Yeshiva's most important product.

by Nathan Dembin

Student Council must attempt to establish full communication with the student body, not merely raise the cry of apathy. Full discussion and debate must prevail and Robert's Rules of Order must not be thrown against the wall. Meetings must be planned regularly and agenda and minutes must be distributed.

If elected I hope to implement the following program:

1. A curriculum evaluation program in an attempt to recommend new and additional courses and encourage inter-departmental courses such as a course in biological chemistry. Seminar courses will be urged and it will be suggested that the number of students in survey courses be reduced.

2. The establishment of a committee for intercollegiate activities to determine worthy recreational, cultural, and educational events that are being presented at nearby colleges. This information will be related to the students to allow them to participate in them.

3. A cultural series will be designed to provide for art exhibits and a series of concerts by the students and by others. As part of this program it is also planned to have a series of debates and symposiums on controversial and pertinent issues and an expanded and more evenly timed film series.

4. The establishment of a series of Student Council lectures to be delivered by faculty members from other universities to allow us to come into intellectual contact with new ideas and different schools.

5. The establishment at Yeshiva of as many national honor fraternities as we have eligible properly qualified students.

6. To expand and diversify the Co-op and allow it to once again distribute recordings and pocket books. Also, to have it make available to a much greater extent discount tickets to Broadway and off-Broadway shows.

What is needed is a dynamic program. One to electrify and vitalize Yeshiva University and to lead it to greater intellectual and cultural development. Yeshiva needs not a change of student government but a changed student government. I urge the students of Yeshiva to assess the issues objectively, and to decide not on personality alone but on the hope of an improved school.

Weiss Announced '62 Valedictorian, Majors In Math

Elected valedictorian of this year's graduating class is Benjamin Weiss, a math major, who will further his studies in the Graduate School of Mathematics at Princeton University under a National Science Foundation Fellowship. Herbert Bloom, an English major, and Norman Kahan, a pre-med major, were also nominated for valedictorians.

Mr. Weiss, besides excelling in mathematics and physics, has an avid interest in the Greek language and in ancient history, and has compiled a cumulative average above 3.83 during his college career. Weiss credits Professor Louis Feldman, head of the classics department, and Professor Arnold Lowen, chairman of the physics department, for stimulating his interests in these fields. A former graduate of Teachers Institute, Mr. Weiss intends to settle in Israel and pursue a non-academic career.

Yeshiva Team Places Tenth In Math Meet

Yeshiva College placed tenth in the honorable mention class in the William Lowell Putnam Mathematical competition held Dec. 2, 1961. Stanley Boylan '63, Larry Schulman '63 and Benjamin Weiss '62 represented Yeshiva College in the tournament sponsored by the Mathematical Association of America. They competed against 1100 students from such top schools in the country as Michigan State, M.I.T., Cal Tech, and Harvard.

Special facilities were arranged for the Yeshiva students to enable them to participate Saturday night in the contest that was held throughout the country on Saturday afternoon.

Three members from each school participated as a team representing their school. Eight students from Yeshiva College took the examination although only the scores of the three team members were counted for Yeshiva's score.

Benjamin Weiss received an honorable mention award for highest achievement on an individual basis.

On The Sidelines

Unmitigated Villain

by Stuart Berman

Perhaps the by-line here should go to Rabbi Besdin, chairman of the Jewish Studies Program, who aptly labels a delinquent student an "unmitigated villain".

It seems as though the office or position of college athletic manager is not too clearly defined nor too well executed. Nobody really knows the duties involved; though there is a vague notion that he is to be preoccupied with the intramural program. This poses a few questions: Is he working for Mr. Sarachek or Prof. Wettstein? Or is he just around to pick up a pass to Madison Square Garden?

To get to the root of the problem, we went to the current athletic manager, the loquacious Leonard Pincus. When queried about the degenerated intramural program, Pincus replied—"I really need this, right?" He was more intent on discussing his new hairstyle, designed mostly by Mother Nature with an assist from Joe the Barber. "Actually," claims Pincus, "I had a crew cut, but the crew bailed out and now I have a lot of face to wash." Maybe Angelo's coconut oil will help.

Student Council President Teddy Berman may have rectified the situation somewhat, as he was instrumental in changing the post of athletic manager from an elected office to an appointed position. The reason? The aspirants for the said office ran unopposed in the last three student council elections. Teddy is the most sports-minded prexy we've had since the era of Bouncin' Benny Hirsch and the Gonches. Hirsch, presently a rabbinical student, has been immortalized in the college wrestling annals as the heaviest heavyweight in history.

There has been some chatter about innovations in the intramural set-up. Several stories made the rounds concerning a cage tournament to be held on the newly-erected courts of the scenic Danciger campus. But, let's take it slow. Too much athletic activity out there? It is feared in some quarters that this would cause grave damage to the spiritual community.

In fact, wasn't it one of our boys who said, "Bodily exercise in its different kinds is necessary for the proper preservation of health . . . such actions are mere pastimes in the eyes of the ignorant, but the wise do not consider them unimportant." (Maimonides, The Guide for the Perplexed—Part III, Chap. 25.) Unequivocally, a field house in this area would improve conditions considerably on both the intramural and intercollegiate levels. The gymnasium-recreation center in the "Blueprint for the Sixties" was evidently prepared by an "artist of sorts." Unfortunately, after plowing through the extraneous matter and evasive answers (knee deep) on the subject, we cannot visualize such a plant in the near future. The attitude of the administration has no inspired wild idolatry in this corner. And the prospect of an athletic program remaining downstairs in the basement is not digested easily. In a university setting, this is inconceivable. In reality, this approach is strictly bush league.

Stu's Views

For an unbeaten season, tennis coach Eli Epstein promises the squad a week-end at Grossinger's where he is head pro. The eloquent coach, author of several books on tennis, speaks a unique English—sort of a combination of Casey Stengel and Red Sarachek. . . .

Johnny Halpert, basketball star at YUHS-M, has turned thumbs down to other college offers and will enter YU in the fall. . . .

William "Dolly" King, former LIU All-American and long-time friend of Yeshiva basketball, was honored by the Sportmen's Association last Saturday night in Brooklyn. Our own Bernie Sarachek is president of that group. . . .

The basketball varsity has received an invitation to compete in an international tournament which will be held in Israel this summer. The only obstacle—$3,000. . . .

The fledging ice-hockey team which doggedly maintained practice sessions and scrimmages in Yonkers during the winter sports season, is looking for varsity status. Spearheading the drive are Jack Schenker, Evan Torcyner, Jack Weinberg and Stan "Co-op" Kaplan.

Yeshiva Netmen Win First Four Down Pratt, Poly, Pace, Hunter

Yeshiva swept to its fourth straight win Friday May 4 winning 7 matches against Hunter before substitutes dropped a pair of doubles contests. Ed Schluskel, Itz Balk, Ezra Goodman and Josh Muss successfully won their set without difficulty and clinched the match as Hunter was forced to forfeit 2 matches.

On Tuesday, April 10, the racquet squad downed Pratt 6-3. Mike Samet, YU's strong number one man, swept his event 6-3; 6-1, followed by Eddie Schluskel's 8-6; 6-2 win. Itz Balk, in the fourth slot, registered a 6-4; 6-3 victory over Fiarman of Pratt.

The number two doubles team of Balk and Jeff Tillman won a hard fought 6-1; 7-5 match, while two contests went unplayed.

Hail, The Heroes Conquer

Amid a shower of hailstones, the Epsteinmen then revenged last year's loss to Brooklyn Poly with a 7-2 victory on Thursday, April 12. Freshman Mike Samet led the way by defeating Poly's Rabler 6-0; 6-3. Itz Balk then overcame some first set difficulties to win 8-6; 6-1. Number four man Jeff Tillman coasted to a 6-0; 6-2 advantage while Ezra "Tex" Goodman crushed his foe 6-1; 6-1 and Captain Josh Muss won 6-2; 6-3. Muss and Dave Gordon swept up with a 6-1; 6-4 doubles victory.

Rain, They Win Again

In a May 1 match marred by cold weather and drizzles that reduced the number of serviceable courts, the tennis squad triumphed over Pace College 6-3.

Taking his third straight victory, Mike Samet again led the way. Playing effortless tennis, he downed his man 6-0; 6-1. After a series of long rallies, Jeff Tillman, now 3-1 in match play, took the pace off Pace's Warren 6-4; 6-3.

Sophomore Ezra Goodman ran into strong opposition in his 6-1; 7-5 match, but held on to win and up his record to 3-0. Captain Josh Muss stands at 2-2, while Junior Itz Balk boasts a 3-1 total.

Chessmen's Tour "Draws" To End; Choose Captains

On Sunday, April 15, the Yeshiva College Chess Team embarked on a tour of the Philadelphia area. As originally planned, the chess team was to play six colleges, but three of the colleges cancelled unexpectedly.

Representing Yeshiva were Captain Joel Grossman, who played first board; Barry Frankel, second board; Larry Schulman, third board; Marty Rosman, "B" team captain, and fourth board; Bernie Bendow, fifth board; and Bert Schreiber, sixth board. Manager Ben Lechner accompanied the team on this annual spring tour.

The first match took place Sunday evening April 15 at La Salle College and pitted Yeshiva against Temple University. Things looked very promising as wins by Schulman, Frankel, and Grossman were quickly recorded however, Yeshiva, had difficulty attaining even a draw on the remaining three boards. The final outcome of the match was a disappointing 3-3 draw.

Draws Junior Champ

The next afternoon Yeshiva returned to La Salle College, this time to play an exhibition against the Philadelphia Championship Scholastic Team. A highlight of this exhibition was Joel Grossman's match, in which he played the Pennsylvania Junior Champion to a stand off. The game was called after 46 moves to enable Yeshiva to meet their commitment that evening against the University of Pennsylvania.

Playing the University of Pennsylvania on their campus, the Yeshiva chess players were routed by a very strong Penn team. Only Joel Grossman's draw averted a shut-out. Final score: U. of P. 4½ — Yeshiva ½.

Tuesday afternoon saw the Yeshiva team travel to La Salle College for the third time, finally, to play the home contingent La Salle. Yeshiva got off to an early 2½ — ½ lead on wins by Schulman and Rosman, and the draw by Schreiber. La Salle, however, came right back to tie the score, before Frankel managed to win the deciding game, giving Yeshiva a well earned 3½ — 2½ win.

Captains Appointed

Outgoing Captain Joel Grossman announced the appointment of Barry Frankel '63 and Marty Rosman '63 as co-captains of the chess team for the coming year.

The Yeshiva Chess Team finished second in the six team division of the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Chess League with a 3½ — 1½ record. The team's over-all record was 5-4.

Sports Profile:

by Selig Solomon

A most remarkable figure among the various coaches at YU is Tennis Coach Eli E. Epstein. Mr. Epstein is a man who has dedicated his life to physical education and professional competition. He is a genuine individual who doesn't merely coach the sport but has written books about the game and is continually studying new methods to improve the game.

having been engaged in professional tennis for over 36 years, our talented coach still believes that to win or lose a match doesn't really matter.

Although Eli has competed against some of the top tennis greats of all time including such present day stars as Pancho Gonzales and Bobby Riggs, he feels that the greatest opponent he ever

Coach Epstein and Rocky Marciano

Coach Epstein is truly a professional's professional.

Born and raised in the Bronx where he presently resides, Mr. Epstein was among the first graduates of the New York School of Education. He then attended New York University where he majored in physical education and obtained his master's degree.

Coach Epstein started his sparkling professional career at the age of fourteen when he was hired as a tennis assistant at a resort hotel. As a young athlete he combined both the willingness and the ability to work hard at his game so that by the time Eli was twenty-one he had already reached his peak as a tennis pro. Now, faced was Bill Tilden, the "Babe Ruth of tennis." When asked to relate the greatest thrill of his coaching career, Eli responded with a broad smile and declared, "It occurred in 1950 when I guided the then U.S. Champion Art Larsen to correct the flaws in his game. "Triple E," as he is affectionately known by his contemporaries, has served as tennis coach for numerous colleges.

During the past year Mr. Epstein, an avid cosmopolitan, visited Israel where he was instrumental in coaching the Davis Cup Team and the International Ha-poel Team.

In addition to the various other pursuits which keep him busy, Coach Epstein is the head pro at Grossingers Country Club, a position he has more than amply filled for the past 28 years. Some famous celebrities who have been tutored by "Triple E" include Milton Berle, Jacob Javits, Ben Myernon, and Ralph Bunche.
