COMMITTEE WORKING PLAN FOR FRIDAY

Invited Speaker Will Address Students

Plans for a committee meeting on Friday, April 22, were announced at a meeting held last week. The meeting will be held in the University auditorium.

GROUP FORMED TO AID EXPANSION OF Yeshiva New York City

An organization was formed to aid in the expansion of the Yeshiva College. The organization will be headed by Mr. Samuel Nissen, a member of the Board of Trustees.
Unnecessary Friction

Recent action on the part of the administration to segregate efficient students and others has served but again to arouse resentment in the student body.

The policy adopted of sending letters to parents has become a new point of friction between the student body and the administration, and relations have once more become strained.

The resentment on the part of students is fully justifiable, we think, inasmuch as it is an indication of an attitude on the part of officials that we find difficult to understand.

College men are mature enough and self-sufficient enough to merit discussion of the scholastic problems they may have. To administer questions to the high school by ignoring the students themselves, is not only not a serious tactical error, but an insulting attitude at which students are bound to be aggrieved.

From a broader point of view, furthermore, the recent actions are subject to the gravest question. Discipline is a matter of mutual respect. It is created by harmony and consideration. Any attempts at imposition externally can produce only a reaction. Efforts at repression, therefore, are worse than useless, as long as there is no rapport between the parties concerned.

This purpose has thus been served by the letters beyond the creation of friction. High school methods simply will not work in a college.

From the point of view of the administration, however, a problem exists which must be faced and must be solved. The fact that a large number of cases exists is evidence of the fact that there is a serious inability upon the part of the administration to maintain discipline. Notification of parents does not strike at this problem at all. It is a superficial procedure which does not approach the crux of the question and can produce no lasting positive effect.

If, indeed, there is a hindrance to the proper execution of students to regulations, the reason must be discovered and faced, however, whatever it may be.

Medical Examinations

Upon several occasions during the past few weeks, members of the administration have appeared on the bulletin boards notifying students of the schedules of physical examinations. At the scheduled time, the physicians on the medical staff were in the gymnasium waiting for the students to appear at the scheduled hour. Physical examinations must be taken by the students at some time during the course of the term.

Why can they not help facilitate the work of the medical staff by appearing at the appointed hour? Aside from labeling them as incapable, it is the only way members of the staff to come down week after week only to see a few students?

We certainly can do this much to show our appreciation of the work done by the staff:

Jubilee Within Yeshiva

The Yeshiva Jubilee celebration held last Sunday was over. The children who participated in the pilgrimage have gone home, duly impressed. The delegates who arrived from many communities in the near East to join in the Jubilee Dinner given by the Yeshiva were properly given their tribute to the semi-centennial of the institution and departed.

What part has Yeshiva itself played in the festivities in its honor? It seems to us that the celebration has been purely an external one. While it is true that a few student representatives addressed the children’s assembly, they were not the only ones or the most important ones in that organization as such, nor have they played any part in the program of festivities.

Nor has any department within Yeshiva held any sort of celebration of the anniversary. There has not been so much as an anniversary that has been devoted to a consideration of the part Yeshiva has played in American Jewish life.

It is but fitting that instructors and students start now to plan a program that will this year’s jubilee a holiday of Yeshiva rather than for Yeshiva.

In The Editor’s Mail Box

To the Editor of the Commentator,

Dear Sir,

We wish to express to you, through you to the students, our gratitude for your cooperation in the operation and development of the B.B. The B.B. is the only way that we can keep in touch with Yeshiva College, the only way that we can get news of the students, the only way that we can keep in touch with the students.

We believe that the B.B. is a valuable asset to the student body and the college, and we hope that it will continue to remain so.

Yours sincerely,

To the Editor of the Commentator,

Dear Sir,

I read with interest the recent article on the importance of a good education. I believe that you are absolutely right in saying that education is the key to success in life. I am currently enrolled in a college program and I am working hard to improve my skills and knowledge. I think that everyone should be encouraged to pursue higher education and I hope that more people will see the value of it.

Sincerely yours,

To the Editor of the Commentator,

Dear Sir,

I wanted to thank you for your recent article on the importance of education and the role of Yeshiva in Jewish life. I think that your article was very insightful and I am sure that it will help to raise awareness about the importance of education.

I myself am a student at Yeshiva College and I am very happy with my experience so far. I think that the college has a great curriculum and the teachers are very knowledgeable and helpful.

I hope that more people will be able to attend Yeshiva College and experience the benefits of a Jewish education.

Sincerely yours,

ON THE SIDELINES

The sports editor of the Commentator has become a member of the union of sports columnists. For the benefit of those who are unfamiliar with this form of collective bargaining let us explain.

The union posts yearly its requirements. Firstly, one must be a sports columnist. Qualitative attributes need not affect membership.

Secondly, perspective members must be of rather hefty proportions, puissant to be exact.

Thirdly, one must have attempted to predict a sports event at least once, and to have emerged on the wrong end of the candle at the last minute.

Your columnist was the proud possessor of the first two qualifications, but the third, had eluded him until recently. It was then that he attempted to read the Yeshiva sports horoscope.

The Yeshiva chess team had participated in the intercollegiate chess tournament, and had emerged with an ignominious record. Only one match did capture the context of the contest, finishing next to last out of approximately ten college teams.

Throughout these matches George Silver, captain of the squad, consistently lost his matches due to carelessness and in ability to take his opponents seriously.

A match was arranged immediately after Spring recess between St. Peters and Yeshiva. It was a renewal of rivalry between the two institutions. The teams had met once before during the season, the result being a draw. The two exchanged teams with Silver, the white pieces, and Oppenheimer, the black, being the players for the games.

Mr. Oppenheimer, who had defeated Silver in their first meeting, played an opening of the Steinitz Variation, a closed game. Silver, on the contrary, opened with the Sicilian Defense, a much more aggressive approach.

The opening was followed by a mutual agreement to continue in the Sicilian with Black. Silver moved first with Nf3, which was met by Black with d5.

A fierce battle of wills ensued, with both players attempting to outmaneuver the other. The game continued with an exchange of minor pieces, leaving a pawn structure for both sides. The game was then adjourned.

The second day, both players returned to the board ready for a continuation of the match. Silver made his move with Ne5, which was met by Black with Nd7.

The game continued with the development of pieces and a king's side pawn advance by Black. The position became complicated, with both sides having chances for the win.

The final move of the game was made by Silver with a sacrificial pawn on the queen's side. Black accepted the sacrifice and Silver resigned, as the position was lost.

The result of the match was a draw, with both players displaying a high level of skill.

Throughout these matches George Silver, captain of the squad, consistently lost his matches due to carelessness and in ability to take his opponents seriously.
Commentator Wins First Class Honors

This is the second year that the Commentator has competed in the critical service. Second Class Award was given to the Commentator last year, with special commendation for editorial content and policy. The climb to first place this year was made in the face of increased difficulty and requirements, due to the classification of the Commentator as a weekly, rather than bi-weekly.

Pons Continues Present Program

With the exception of two or three guest star appearances, the voice of Lily Pons has not been heard over the air for nearly a year. However, recently, the popular "Girl From Paris" began her new series with great success. "That Girl from Paris" has had a good year. No other singer has appeared who can remotely approach the tiny French star's beautiful coloratura and Miss Pons' popularity increases every day.

Despite many other radio offers she has been exposed to, nobody as far as the Commentator knows, can replace Lily Pons in the field.

School Children Assemble Here

(Continued from page 1) instruction. Messina Biun of Iraq, Alice Levy of China, Miss Levy of Poland, and Mora and Martin of Russia, all of whom stressed the fact that the influence of Torah, the strength of Torah in America, extended to all parts of the world, as evidenced by the diversified nationalities of its students.

Following a musical interlude by the Hebrew Orphan Asylum Band, Harold Shostak '22, as the representative of the undergraduate student body, welcomed the young pilgrims in both Hebrew and English, describing the purpose of the trip and extending a cordial invitation to all the students to join in the trip in the future.

He was answered by Nathan Steinman, a visiting student, who spoke in Hebrew, pledging the support of the students.

The program concluded with a recitation by Judith Goldberg, 182nd student, and was followed by a declamation by Blumberg Rosen, also a great reciter. The program lasted two hours; despite the shortness of its length, the audience seemed to be something worthy waiting for.

Letters To The Editor
