Stern Strides Towards Goal for 1960's

Courageous and Dauntless Gal Champions Crusading "Observer"

In an exclusive interview to the Observer, a reliable source, who must remain anonymous, told how editor Rochel Sperling galvanized the publishing union in an effort to keep her readers informed.

While the rest of the city's major newspapers went on strike, the Observer, circulation approximately 519, refused to stop printing. According to our source, the other publishers supposedly signed the statement, "It's not nice!

"But it is rumored that a representative of the New York Post, the only other newspaper still publishing, when asked by television newsmen Walter Cronkite on a recent "Meet the Press" broadcast about his paper's reaction to the conflict, replied, "The observer!"

Old reliable, our source, also confirmed the rumor that there was a time when the staff of the Observer was on the verge of striking because of low wages.

Bell Schedule and Club Additions

JAKUBOVICS

Students returning to Stern College have discovered many news innovations at the college.

The student lounge, has acquired a new appearance. At present the center portion is be used as a book exchange. While in the near future, the lounge will be converted into a relaxation-reading room. Students will be urged to use their tables as to alleviate the over crowded conditions in the library.

For the convenience of the student body, a new bell schedule has been introduced. Term periods have been altered to allow a student to have more time free.

In conjunction with the schedule change, a new book hour has been introduced. Clubs will meet this 1005 on Wednesday mornings.

The Drama Club will be meeting during this time, while play rehearsals will be held in the evenings.

To intensify our intellectual activity, a Book Club will be formed. Members must periodically read a current book. A guest speaker will then discuss the major issues of the book and will stimulate discussion.

Asking Sperling not very successful. To enhance this popular position, a Guitar Club is being formed.

A Hebrew Club is also being introduced. (This will be a cultural exchange deriving into Hebrew.)

"L'Shanah Tovah from President"

"The present year our nation's legislators have written into law a number of measures designed to bring dignity into the lives of our citizens.

"As we enter the new year 5726, it is worth remembering what our sages have told us about the spirituality of human behavior—that man is judged not only by his acts but also by his intentions; that, indeed, even those intentions which are not translated into action may constitute a man's worthlessness.

"Man's good intentions and human intelligence cannot provide the final answer to the search for a spiritual life. Only through continuous training in the moral duties stipulated in the Torah and defined by the oral tradition, and only by continued contact with the welfare of others, as outlined in the Torah, can man attain the great virtue bound up in the Word Thad shall love thy neighbor as thy self.

"The Jewish people, the first of God's children to recognize and abide by His and His spiritual laws, have a special responsibility to reaffirm in Yeshivah, and in every Yeshivah, the quest for the spiritual rebirth of our nation and ourselves. And we must do so by reaffirming our faith in the Almighty who cared for man with his own likeness.

"At Yeshivah University, we enter the new year with a profound sense of humility. We are moving into our 80th year, a long time in the memory of man but a brief span in the history of mankind.

As we dedicate ourselves to the search for knowledge that will help man find a better life, we must remember, as all Jewish people must remember in the days of our love of man, that the future is dependent upon our love of God.

"May we properly serve to fellow man reflect our own disregard for the Almighty. Clearly, the sacredness of the human personality and the infinite worth of the individual are deeply imbedded, irrevocably and unreplaceable cornerstone to the moral and religious structure of Judaism."
Minyan Minded

Stern needs a Shabbos minyan! This is not an idea foreign to the college, which in the past sponsored services on campus for those dormers who remained for the weekend.

The need for the minyan stems from the fact that Stern strives to create a religiously diverse campus. Rabbi Rayman, the rabbi in residence, has said that the college should be one that integrates all parts of the student body.

One reason for the minyan is the lack of classrooms for the minyan. The minyan is located on the second floor of the old building.

The minyan is not a place for students to hang out and socialize, but rather a place for prayer and reflection.

Hello... Hello...

Stern College's new dorm on 69 East 24th St. is a welcome acquisition, whose many advantages are recognized by the dormers. However, one particular problem is the lack of sufficient telephone facilities to accommodate the 80 girls now residing in the building.

Currently, there are nine connections on the switchboard, which is not enough to meet the needs of the students.

Another factor that contributes to the problem is the lack of a second floor for the dorm. As a result, students are forced to use the switchboard on the first floor.

The switchboard is only open from 7-11 p.m. on weekdays, and until midnight on Saturdays and Sundays.

The switchboard is in operation during the day, but only for the dorm. This situation must be rectified.

The solution is to have more connections on the switchboard.

It is not fair to make girls wait on the extra expense of a phone. There should be someone working on the switchboard all day and someone ready to answer the extension phones at night.

Thank you,

Jett Smulevitz

Miracle on 34th St.

"Blueprint for the Sixties" has become a reality for Stern College, and the results are evident on 34th Street between Park and Madison Avenues. The new building, which has dormitory and classroom facilities, presently houses eighty Underclassmen.

The entire student body joins the Observer in thank-you's for the efforts in acquiring our new quarters and added facilities. The washers and dryers in the basement save much time and effort. The spacious new lounge, which contains a T.V., sandwich machine, refrigerator, and stove, is a preview of similar rooms to be installed in the dorm as it is filled.

The dormitory is not only practical, but convenient and comfortable as well. There are house phones in each apartment and private phones are being installed at individual request. Provisions have been made for female overnight guests. And we of the Observer staff would like to add a special thanks for our permanent office located in Apartment 5b.

Although not without flaws, this new building represents a giant step forward towards the goals of expan- sion and betterment of Stern College in the Sixties. May the new year bring this goal even closer to fruition.

It may only be bread and water, but at least we have a place to sit!
Our Girl Abroad: Hebrew U. Offers New Ulpan Program

It's still vacation time at Hebrew University. The only students you may see now are the returning students, those who went abroad for the summer Ulpan. The news is that new students may enter in the fall.

The sounds in the air are different. Think of the Hebrew class rings and keys. In place of events for students in English, or Spanish, is the Ulpan program which is aimed at raising the standards of students who will be entering the University. Because of this, it is forced to speak Hebrew and not English, in order to be understood.

The Ulpan, about 10 are full, is usually packed with students who will be entering the University. It is the fall semester and the school year has begun. Dr. Raphael Greenstein, professor of psychology, wrote an article "Rationale for Revelation in The Jewish Hesed." Dr. S. Weinberg, professor of Jewish History, had an article "Jewishness for B'nei Zion" in Adath Israel Memorial Volume.

The words "more than anyone: Renard Appears On Stage for the First Time" are missing from the text.

Happy Days Are Here Again

Renard Appears in Beckett Play

HAPPY DAYS" by Samuel Beckett, which is presently playing at the Cherry Lane Theatre, opens with a scene in which the heroine is encased in wax up to her waist in a room.

Winnie, played by the great French actress Madeleine Renard, gives us a continuous gamut of tears, as she plays a tune on a music box, the pain and sadness of memory sweeps over her face.

In our second act, we see Winnie located in a bed up to her neck, and when Winnie finally attempts to extricate herself, she again affirms that this is one of her happy days.

Beneath the surface, we get the surface, we get two total "A在今年".

A 16TH CENTURY Italian physician, Jacob Maslin, in 1577, was appointed professor of medicine at the University of Rome, the first Jew to hold such a post.

New Dormitory . . .

(Continued from page 1) switchboard is manned between the hours of seven and eleven each night. The underclassmen also maintain that there is not enough time between classes to go back and forth from one building to another.

A junior made some relevant observations. We do not pay much attention, there with, to be the need for a fresh elevator. It's quite a walk from the seventeenth floor to the first. Also, for four girls in a room there are only two desks. A sophomore also remarked that there is a music practice room with a piano in the new dorm.

Dian Designates 3 Dosen Eggsheads

To students of Stern College, the achievement of Dean's List is the event culminating a long hard year of work. These girls who achieve an overall 3.4 average for both semesters are eligible.

Dr. Dan Vogel has announced that approximately 10% of Stern's student body achieved Dean's List during the 1964-65 school year.

These include Vivian Baum, Maika Brome, Marilyn Pott, Sue, Sarah Katz, Maria Lee, Addie Levine, Era Lewis, Naomi Levanit, Max Max, Reda Ruth Neuman, Esther Yacht, Elene Tsa,2, Miriam Tenenbaum, and Helene Wellin, Seniors.

Others include Shirley Blitving, Susan Goldenberg, Esther Koening, Phyllis Kressel, Phyllis Krass, Marina Krasinski, Miriam Levy, Phyllis Neuman, Rebecca Ulman, and Nicole Wenzler.

A TOTAL of $130,000 in all allocations have been distributed at the Conference of Jewish Missions in New York City last May.
Encore: English Lecturer Revisited by Students

By CHIA RAMAS

Having learned that Mr. Barry had invited his English classmates to his weekly tea parties, I decided to call on him one day. It was then that I learned about his passion for tea and his love of literature.

Mr. Barry is known for his erudition and his love for collecting and sharing rare books. He is a member of the British Library and has access to many rare volumes.

Mr. Barry's tea parties are held every Saturday afternoon at his home. The guests are usually a mix of students and faculty members. His tea is always accompanied by his favorite biscuits and a selection of rare books.

I was invited to attend one of Mr. Barry's tea parties and was amazed by the variety of rare books that he had on display. I learned that he had spent years collecting these books and was eager to hear his stories about them. I was also impressed by his knowledge of literature and his ability to engage in deep conversations about the classics.

Mr. Barry's tea parties are not just about literature, however. He is also known for his kindness and his ability to make everyone feel welcome. He has a warm personality and a talent for making people feel comfortable.

I left Mr. Barry's tea party that day feeling enriched by my experience. I was grateful for the opportunity to learn from him and to share in his passions for tea and literature.

The Forecast Deemed Mildly Entertaining

By RAYMOND LANDERS

The forecast for the weekend is mild and pleasant, perfect for those who enjoy a leisurely stroll or a picnic with friends.

The temperatures are expected to remain mild throughout the weekend, with highs in the mid-60s. There is a slight chance of showers on Saturday afternoon, but it should clear up by evening.

The weekend is an ideal time to enjoy the outdoors, whether it be hiking, biking, or simply taking a walk in the park. The mild temperatures are perfect for these activities, and the pleasant weather will make for a relaxing and enjoyable experience.

The weekend is also a great time for those who enjoy reading and relaxing with a good book. The numerous local bookstores and libraries offer a wide variety of books to choose from, and there are many parks and gardens where you can enjoy a cup of coffee and a good book.

Overall, the weekend forecast is mild and pleasant, making it the perfect time to enjoy the outdoors and engage in some leisurely activities.
