Interview With Rabbi Hollander Clarifies Chagiga Speech Points

By Jacob M. Lebowitz and Joseph Silverstein

"Compromise should only exist when the rabbi permits a deviation to continue which is not absolutely, halachically, ige'a1. When dealing with the stage where they are strictly forbidden by halacha, any so-called compromise is not to be attempted," Rabbi Hollander clarified in response to our opening question.

Rabbi Hollander deplored, again, the fact that Orthodox rabbis permit situations to exist in their congregations which, instead of being temporary expedients, become permanent states of affairs.

Suggest Committee

In order to obtain halachically correct solutions, Rabbi Hollander suggested that the various yeshive standing committees be formed. The committees would consist of men who are not personally involved in the affairs of the particular yeshive.

Regarding those congregations which sanction practices strictly against halacha, the president of the UA suggested that a "made of attack" for Orthodoxy could and should be some attempt to present the public the official position of Orthodoxy.

Tend to Peninsular

Rabbi Hollander went on to comment that "the greatest, single thing for which Orthodoxy rabbis should do teshuva is their lack of faith in the religious qualities of the foreign congregations. Rabbis tend to be too peninsular: it comes to considering the nological feeling for Orthodoxy which is not to be found in other countries but which their environments strive.

Lack Guidance

Rabbi Hollander attributed the lack of guidance among Orthodox rabbis for the absence of a method for religious guidance and education in the yeshiva program in general, and to Talmudic rabbis in particular. Rabbi Hollander stressed the idea that such a program be put into effect as a required part of the training of the modern Orthodox rabbi. He complained of the fact that during his "I.A." he had received no such guidance.

"A rabbi whose education included such religious guidance will not take a lenient attitude toward the deviations of his congregation. He will take these deviations more seriously and treat them as permanent. "I don't think a rabbi without this guidance," he concluded.

In summing up the tasks lying ahead of the modern Orthodox, Rabbi Hollander declared that "Orthodoxy must stick to its guns by maintaining its distinctiveness and by not letting itself be attracted to compromises of expediency."

Ed. Note: The speech of Rabbi David B. Hollander before the Rabbinical Council of America, at the S.O.Y. Chanuka Cha­giga, dealing with the Orthodox rabbinate, was delivered at the request of the Committee on Chagiga and interest on the part of Y.U. students, who are the future leaders of the American Orthodox rabbinate.

A Step in The Right Direction

The establishment of a review board (see story, page 1) manifests a willingness on the part of the administration to justly solve problems arising between the administration and individual students. We endorse this plan because of the assurance that future differences resulting from alleged breaches of University rules will be given a fair hearing before this board.

It is encouraging to note that student representatives will be present at these board meetings. It is to be hoped that the administration will afford serious consideration to the opinions of the student representatives, and make them functionaries of the board.

Student-administration cooperation in solving problems before they become issues has been a policy often campaigned for in the past, but with little results. Both the administration, and the students, as well as the student representatives, have a task to do.

Religions Guidance

The views expressed by Rabbi David B. Hollander, president of the Rabbinical Council of America, in the report of an interview which appears on this page, accentuate, once again, the need for religious guidance at Yeshiva. The student body has long been clamoring for such guidance.

A progressive step in this direction is the lecture series by Rabbi Nathan M. Bulman. The series, which is sponsored by S.O.Y., will begin at 9 p.m. tonight in Room 431 of the College building.

In addition, the administration has announced plans for major changes in the present religious guidance program as proposed by the College Student Council, including the introduction of courses on Judaism into the College curriculum.

We are confident that if students turn out in force for Rabbi Bulman's lectures and thereby indicate an interest in and desire for a functioning guidance program, the administration will certainly fulfill its promises to provide much-needed religious guidance.

Mazel Tov

We wish to compliment the administration upon its recently accelerated renovation program. The corridors and passageways between Rietts Hall and Lampert Auditorium have been redone with speed and skill. We have long urged such steps but our words went unheeded. We applaud this sudden interest on the part of the administration and hope that it will not soon lag.

Anti-noise Campaign

The anti-noise campaign, recently initiated by the Dorm Council, warrants the support of every dorm resident. The thuggishness which continues in Dorm hours of the morning makes study or sleep impossible. Students who play their radios loudly and argue hotly in the halls, infringe upon the rights of their fellow dorm residents. They should show more responsibility and consideration by refraining from these practices. It is the duty of every dorm student to recognize his responsibilities and make this anti-noise campaign a success.

Fencers Attempt to Avenge Last Year's Brooklyn Defeat

If anyone has been down to the Yeshiva Fencing salon during the past few weeks, then he is well aware of what has been going on. The "Tabbermen" have been getting ready for their first big match of the new year.

Last year, Brooklyn defeated Yeshiva in the season opener, but the Mites did manage to take the second match of the season. The upcoming match will be the first major test of the new season for both teams.

Yeshiva Wrestlers Fall in First Match With Brooklyn Poly

The Yeshiva University wrestling team was beaten by Brooklyn Polytechnic, December 21, by a 35-5 count in its first inter-collegiate meet.

The newly formed team, under the leadership of Coach Joe Cassius, started off with a 5-point deficit, being forced to forfeit the 147-lb. division match due to a last minute mishap. One of the highlights of the evening was the 177-lb. tussle in which Aaron Dobin '56 pinned his opponent in 5:20 giving Yeshiva its only victory. The other members of the team were pinned by their opponents.

Need Time

In an interview after the match, Mr. Cassius stated, "Each boy fought to the best of his ability. What we all must realize is that, in general, and wrestling, anything is possible..." The next wrestling match will take place Tuesday, Feb. 14, at 7:30 in the Yeshiva Gym against Rutgers of Newark. Let's get a good crowd down.

The Y. U. five rolled up nine straight points during the first two weeks of the season; they had defeated the Blue and White. Prior to last season they had defeated the Y. U. hoopsters nine consecutive years.

Star Graduated

Queens College, though losing its greatest scorer, George Wilund, through graduation, will still present a formidable five for the year to come. Yeshiva bemoaning their lack of height, the Knights still report 6'3" Immy Lawler and 6'3" Don Hill. Hill averaged 15 points a game last year and is this year's leading scorer. Last season he dunked in 37 points against us, but this year he is starting five are Capt. Leo Saldinger and George Reda, small but effective backcourt men, and Art Simek.

Sodden Needs Relief

Tonight's contest takes on added significance as Capt. Abe Sodden needs to score but eight more points to become the second man in Yeshiva history to score 1000 points. Mrs. Herrick's holds the record. He needs five more to pass her total of 1035 points.

If comparative scores mean anything, tonight's tilt should be nip 'n' tuck all the way. Both teams lost to St. Francis by similar margins. It is fitting to note that Dunkel's Ratings, which accurately has predicted the winning margin of Yeshiva's games, places Queens as a six point underdog. However, with the game being played on the Knights home court, the margin could be even smaller.

 Pace Game

The Mites bounced back from their loss to St. Francis by sinking Pace College 82-55, Dec. 21, at the Downtown Athletic Club.

Getting off to a fast start, the Y. U. five rolled up nine straight points before the opposing squad

JUST LIKE HOME . . . The problem of keeping bulletin boards orderly doesn’t seem to be peculiar to Yeshiva. Long Beach (California) State Teachers College seems not only to share our problem, but to be solving it in the same way. To wit:

The size of the card announcing the new regulation? Three-by-six inches.

AND AGAIN LIKE HOME . . . Possibly our administrator of University parking facilities will assist the local clean-up campaign as follows:

Proof of just how valuable parking space is was shown clearly at Los Angeles City College. At first glance in a cleanup slogan contest, the dean of student personnel gave up his reserved parking space to the winner for the entire semester.

Math Club
A lecture on Gauss’ Perpetual Calendar was delivered by Arnold Singer ‘57, Thursday, December 22. The contents of the lecture are being mimeographed for the convenience of the members.

Work has begun in compiling a reading list to include the best books in various branches of mathematics.

Charles Naiman ’56, president of the club, stressed the importance of writing a research paper on some topic from the point of view of valuable mathematical experience. These papers, he said, may also be material for the journal to be issued this coming June.

Choral Society
The Yeshiva College Choral Society, under the leadership of Dr. Karl Adler, performed before the Bronx and Manhattan chapters of the Yeshiva University Women’s Organization on Monday, December 12, and Tuesday, December 13. The program consisted of Chasukas songs, and a candle lighting ceremony.

The Society is also in need of tenors. All those interested in joining, please see Joseph Kaplan ’56.
