RABBI D. MILLER LECTURE SERIES STARTED MONDAY

Dr. Drachman Offers Outline Of Family Relations

MIRSKY PRESIDES

Dr. Pinkhos Churgin, Rabbi Hoenig Will Address Next Group

The introductory lecture of the Rabbi D. Miller Lecture Series, held on Jewish Family Relations, a survey of the field, was given Monday night, April 6, by Dr. Bernard Waxman, assistant professor of Israel History in the college, in the Reception Hall of the dormitory. Rabbi Samuel K. Levy, assistant to the president, introduced the speaker.

In his lecture, Dr. Drachman quoted numerous references from the Talmud which dealt with the importance of the various phases of the purity of the Jewish family. In outlining the subjects for the future lectures, he pointed out the necessity for a more thorough acquaintance with the laws relating to marriage and family life in order better to appreciate and cope with their purposes.

An open forum followed the lecture.

The Family Purity Strained

The entire series of lectures has been made possible by a gift from Rabbi David Miller of Oakland, California, a frequent contributor to the institution and a leader in the Jewish life including "The Secret of the Jew" and "The Secret of Happiness."

The series of lectures has as its purpose and main theme the study of the laws of family purity which constitute a fundamental part of Jewish history. In the belief that this can be achieved by putting the lectures to use in their proper environment and by fostering an appreciation for them, the series was adopted and established. At the same time the series is a culmination of the efforts of Rabbi Miller to provide orthodox Jews with interesting forums relating to social as well as individual problems of a Jewish background.

Next Lecture, May 2

The next lecture will be delivered after the Passover Holidays, on Monday, May 2, by Dr. Pinkhos Churgin, professor of Jewish History, History of Literature in the college and principal of the Teachers Institute. He will speak on "The history of the academic study of Jewish history and literature."

He will be followed by Dr. Sidney B. Hoenig, instructor in Jewish History, who will brief the students on a complete schedule of the series containing the dates and speakers available at the office of the registrar.

The testimonial dinner in honor of Professor Issacs was an inspiring affair. There were gathered together the pioneers, who as undergraduates in years long past, say, without the benefit of Yeshiva, had sacrificed without measure or self-sacrifice, with them were the faculty men in the fullest sense of the word. They were the graduates of the Charter Day convocation, and the address of Professor Issacs at the testimonial dinner pricked the college alumni to express their readiness to support the most recent, and in many respects most significant, addition to Yeshiva's family.

It is unnecessary here to discuss the contribution which the D.H.L. department is making to American Jewish life. It is becoming more and more evident that a scholarly approach to modern problems of Torah, is indispensable to an understanding of modern problems.

Nowhere is this clearer than in the field of education, where a spiritual leader who would transcend the pettiness of sisterhood politics and grapple with the more important considerations of his profession finds himself in need of other than conventional tools. Without an adequate educational background and a thorough training in method and approach, sincerity and conviction too often become impotent motivating factors, completely incapable of exerting material influence.

It is essential that the more serious of our students recognize these facts and prepare themselves to face them. Consequently, at this time, when plans for the future are being laid, we call the attention of the senior students of the Yeshiva, and more especially those of the college, to the D. H. L. department.

At the same time, let us be impelled to call to the attention of the administration certain practical considerations which assume major proportions to the students involved. Without the factor of time. Without here repeating a detailed analysis of this problem, we recommend for serious consideration the immediate revision of the entrance requirements to the Graduate School so that a college graduate, who is at the same time a senior student of the Yeshiva, may take a limited program towards his D.H.L. degree while completing the requirements for his ordination, thus obviating the needless delay of one or two years.

We are fully convinced that the administration will cooperate to this extent, and we are confident that as the department grew, the experimental stage of the pioneer days an even larger proportion of Yeshiva men will come to recognize the value of its curriculum to the training of the world, to the end that they will prepare today for a tomorrow worthy of themselves and of Yeshiva.

Obituary

It is with deep regrets and sincere sorrow that we learned of the passing of the mother of Dr. Freed to her eternal reward.

To Dr. Freed we extend our sincere condolences in his bereavement.
Juniors Trounce Freshmen; Gain Tie For Championship

A last quarter spurt enabled the juniors to earn a hard fought victory over the freshmen last Wednesday, which entitled them, after winning three and losing none during the second semester, to tie the seniors for the intramural championship.

As play began the freshmen led by Meyer set a fast pace and held their own against the towering juniors. Shafer began the scoring for the latter but Meyer sank one to even the count. After some fierce checking, Sklarin sank a foul following up with a lay up shot which ended the quarter in favor of the juniors 5-4.

In the second frame the blistering attack was kept up with both sides getting four points apiece. Rosenbloom and "Am­ny" Kestenbaum sank two lay up shots while Zoroff and Kossoty scored for the frosh. After the intermission the "tenor" of the game changed as the juniors began ripping the previous "yearling" defense wide open. During a junior attack the "frost" broke away to score neatly but Rosenbloom scored twice and Kestenbaum, high scorer of the evening, clinched the victory with two quick baskets. The game ended with the score 13-10 in the juniors’ favor.

A week previously the juniors won their second game by defeating the sophists in a tight defensive game 25-14. Rosenbloom was high scorer for the juniors with ten points and Maimon starred for the sophists scoring eight points.
