NOVECK DISAPPOINTED AT MASIMID’S SHOWING

An Annual Is $250 Short of Financial Goal

Despite the fact that an appeal has been made over holidays that the students cooperate with the Masimid, the result has been discouraging, according to Simon Noveck '35, Editor-in-Chief.

This conclusion was based on the fact that with the publication date set for May 1, the annual is still lacking $250.00 in order to cover expenses, and several of the literary departments have, yet, to sell all their parts. Simon Noveck naturally hopes that the Masimid of this year will far outstrip the annual of last year.

He therefore urged all students to "take a part in the issuing of the Masimid." He further announced that several positions open on the staff, he added.

Large Audience Sees Play in College Auditorium; Politkov Stars

SUFFEN IS DIRECTOR

Lighting, Sound Effects Under Gabriel Aid Production

Culminating a year's efforts to establish dramatics as a functioning extra-curricular activity at Yeshiva, the presentation of "Journey's End" by the Dramatic Society Tuesday night was seen in a setting worthy of all favorable weather conditions. An audience of nearly 700 persons present in the College Auditorium was delighted.

The cast of the B. C. Shen- wick play, was Wells (Chang) '35 as Stanhope, Lester Silverman '35 as "Black Jack," Aaron Politkov '35 as "The Professor," and Harold Politkov '35 interpreted the role of "Mrs. Suffen."

So well did the audience receive Politkov's portrayal of the emotional reactions of the cowardly, trying to escape from the lines of duty, that he made his exit in the middle of a scene; a spontaneous burst of applause followed his bow.

The comic relief was provided by Abraham Noveck '35, poring cockleberry over the "Suffen" in the play. Edward Kaplan '35, company chef, was rolled through the audience in such questions as the unattended work, and the disinfecting process took over the strategy of war.

Ed and Osborne, brought out the popular in the play's dialogue scene with the great Stanhope, youthful commander of the company.

SCREAM!

Although the recent eviction of nine unfortunate boarders from their erstwhile dormitory domicile bears the stamp of tragedy for those concerned, still it is not without its moments of hilarity. It reminds one of the situation of the medical student in the "Pickwick Papers," whose existence is bounded by a landlady—who isn't always a lady. Still, I suppose, like everything else in life, the old saying, "you can't make your bed and sleep in it, too," holds true.

The Pickwickians of our drama include quite a host of celebrities around the Yeshiva main stem. A prominent alumnus of '31, in executive of the student body, a couple of local thespians, a sports writer, a news editor, and many others are among those exiled. Nor does it stop here. As we go to press it is already widely rumored that many other culprits are scheduled for the bailiff's tap on the shoulder—be it through fiscal failure, or through findings of the trusty minion of the Minyan.

To make life even more interesting, bulletin boards were posted that reek strangely of an Aryan origin. They fairly emanate with expressions of open ridicule on the "Yid" and "pan-fritztualism," as they read: "Eight students have already been asked to leave, etc., etc., the harboring of a student is a violation, etc." And at night a fellow can't get to bed until 1:30 or 2 A.M.—that is, after the night watch has made its rounds to do the duty in the days of the inquisition, that "no citizens shall harbor a Jew in his domain." Time marches on—and how!

As a result of the evictions, the "exiles" are ever seeking a haven of refuge for the night. Those expired have devised many ingenious ways of circumventing the sanctions. Some few wait until the "nightly guard" has flashed its warning and then slip into some vacant room. Others erect makeshift beds in unoccupied corners of the building. A M.I.S. intellectual has concocted a plan, where, by subtracting, in arithmetic progression, two hours of sleep per night, he and his associates have entirely done away with the problem of sleep.

* * *

Analyzing the situation in a more philosophic light, one finds serious psychological complications. A student walks into his former room. The bed is bare. There is something startling and awful about the outlook. The empty spring, like the jaw of a skeleton, fills one with dread. Look! The

Institutions of Diversified Curricula

Kingsville, Texas—(ACF) Ten students were picked at random from the University of Arts and Industries campus here and asked if they'd willingly take part in the questionnaire.

"Students are so much happier when they are working their way through college," said Representative Nicholas, University of Minnesota.

Bernfeld Advocates Yearly Terms for S.O.Y. Officers

An attempt will be made in the S.O.Y. Council to extend the terms of office for one year instead of the present half-year terms, Dining Room Manager Benjamin Bernfeld announced.

"The usual failures of administrations are due to the fact that the programs and students' demands cannot be carried out in such short periods of time, particularly in the dining room, where a frequent change in administration hampers the progress of fulfilling student demands," he stated.

Since the Spring Term is so brief, the Dining Room Committee will not be able to carry out a successful program which would yield to the demands of the student body. However, the committee in its short term assures the members of the S.O.Y. that it will work its utmost to set

The dining room manager asked for student cooperation in the maintenance of discipline and order in the cafeteria during the hours when the meals are served.

Bernfeld felt particularly confident of a successful regime as far as the dining room is concerned by virtue of the committee he had chosen to assist him.
