Dr. Leo J. Goldstein, Depths and B. N. met on Sunday morning at 10 a.m. by plane on a tour of a number of states in the south-west in the interest of Yeshiva, which he was received recently.

Dr. Jung speaks of the Southern Tour

To travel Principally in Texas and Oklahoma

With Mr. Sarr

Dr. Leo J. Goldstein, professor of ethics at Yeshiva University, is on a tour of the South in the south-west in the interest of Yeshiva. He was recently appointed to travel in Yeshiva, which was received.

The purpose of the tour is to be visited by officials of the Southern states and to discuss the current issues of Yeshiva. The tour will take place in the South of the United States.

Dr. Jung will concentrate his efforts primarily in Texas and Oklahoma and will be accompanied by Prof. Alexander Liptzin of the philosophy department.

Further details of the tour were withheld until definite reports are received concerning the outcome.

Second Meeting of J.U.C. Takes Place

Lecturer Points Out Jewish Position in World

The Jewish University Club, a constituent division of the United Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, held its second meeting of the current year Sunday evening at the West Side branch of the Institute Synagogue.

The feature of the evening was a lecture by Mr. Harrison B. C. Smith, authority on the history of the Jewish people.

The speaker was introduced by Mr. Margulith, lecturer in the Jewish University Club. The lecture was given Wednesday evening, November 15 at 8:30 o'clock.

Dorm Renovation Is Gift of Fishel

General Renovation Of Building Going On

The painting in the dormitory was completed last week, which marks the beginning of a general renovation of the dormitory. This much-needed work was made possible by a donation from Mr. Fishel whose gift will provide needed space and improve the appearance of the dormitory.

This February, the history of the International Relations Club starts Program On Various Aspects

The International Relations Club plans to institute a new program for the remainder of the year consisting of a number of peace forums, which was announced by Harold Pollit 36, secretary of the club.

These forums will deal with such important issues as war and peace, and their implications.

Experiences on Trip Revealed By Liptzin

Talk of Holy Land Sojourn at Party Reception

Dr. Liptzin returns from a trip to the Holy Land, where he visited Jerusalem and other sacred sites.

The first of a series of similar lectures on the "Adventures in the Holy Land" will be held on December 14.
Our Last Stand

Eighteen years ago today, world leaders called a moratorium on murder. Tomorrow, next week, or next month, that moratorium will expire. Then—back to the slaughter.

Eighteen years have passed. Just long enough for things to grow up. A generation too young to know the full misery of the last war, and just old enough to be sent off to learn the horrors of the next.

A good number of changes have occurred in the intervening years. "Splendid isolation" has been dealt a death-blow by advances in aviation. When one can fly from New York to Berlin in a day or so, war definitely ceases to be a battle of armies, and the hosemen of unrest at present are cause for just alarm.

While, of course, goes the fact that the immensity of any part of the citizenship has likewise been relegated to limbo. The coming conflict will hardly not be restricted to the comparative few who are sent to the front. Next week's battlefield will not be so deader, plain upon which military maneuvers will be held. It will be down the block, or in the next door back yard.

For this second result of scientific progress, there is good reason for being grateful. No more will the country be under the stigma of trench warfare, having their minds tortured with uncertainty for the future of their loved ones at home. These will be adequately taken care of by air raids.

Then again, the next war will not leave a wake of desolation, hopeless widows and squabbling orphans. These, too, will be taken care of by bombs and gas. Not there likely to be merriment at hospitals after the next catalastrophe. It is not probable that military leaders will be content with half measures.

But this is not a plea for humanity in warfare. That is a contradiction in terms; all international pacts to the contrary notwithstanding. This is a simple recognition of what war is, and of the fact that the modern day war must of necessity engender:

Philosophical? Exaggerated? It is exactly just the sort of people that the peace movement's difficulties lie. It is only too easy and too natural for people to seek the easiest way out of a situation causing anxiety. We are too prone to seek a paradise for ourselves and arrange an ostrich-like indifference to an impending catastrophe.

That is why a realization of what faces the world is greeted with attempts to minimize the problem and to show that a lack of appreciation of this sort is not very difficult to cope with. What is of much greater seriousness to us is the attempt at diversification and distortion of peace propaganda by political and unscrupulous charlatans. Efforts to discredit student peace movements have constantly been made and will not doubt become more effective as the regular pre-war wave of propaganda reaches its stride.

It is up to us, the prospective victims, to maintain a well-fortified defense. It is one thing to have a dream, and another thing to be cognizant of a real threat hanging over our lives.

There is only one force for peace at present that is not in danger of being stolen by the pressure of vicious war propaganda. That is a militant student front against war.

It is up to the students of America to decide whether it is still possible to sustain a sufficiently powerful movement to be started and sustained. Such a movement would be the last stand before the crumbling of other peace foundations could be a strong base for post-war petition.

We are engaged in a grim defensive battle. There is but one issue. Are we to live or die with the war? Are we to be misled, torn, and slaughtered?

There is but one answer, and that answer must be made now.

Reprisal—Where Now?

With meaning sincerity we welcome the appointment of a dormitory supervisor to handle the dormitory Life for Yeshiva students. We hail this step as a concrete accomplishment based upon the realization that the dormitory is the home of its residents, and its influence over a long life of years is powerful force, hitherto all discredited.

With true earnestness we pledge our active cooperation in any constructive program that may be required.

Yet, on the other hand, we wonder whether all progress must be accompanied by an even greater reversion; whether one step forward must be accompanied by two steps backward.

We wonder whether the appointment of a dormitory supervisor necessitated the abolition of the students' right to be heard in matters which affect them so vitally and so directly.

It had been our opinion that the administration had long accepted as axiomatic the right of students to be represented when questions affecting them are being passed upon.

We were not alone in this opinion. Every student council that took up the dormitory question acted upon the premise that the indispensable right of student representation would be guaranteed.

The facts, however, do not substantiate their faith in the administration. While all student dormitory bodies were declared non-exempt, the assistant vice president was assigned to preside at the new supervisor in orienting himself in his new surroundings.

No one will concede that any one student, even were he a popular one, could possibly be the interest of an accredited, well-chosen, group of representatives.

The facts remain, and are generally well recognized; no dormitory system can be successful without student cooperation.

Let us not blind ourselves to the truth.

Dear Sir:

Can something be done to remove the monotonous and static nature of the Yeshiva dormitory? It is being used in an unreasonably remote location. It is suggested that a radio be installed to have an opportunity of listening to worthwhile programs. At present, the students are deprived of any enjoyment of outside activities.

Yours truly,

A. Victor

THE LINE-UP;

With the first game of the season only a week off, it wouldn’t be too bad to glance over the prospects of the varsity basketball team. The squad, after being driven at top speed for eight months, will have its most important game of the season over.

At center we have Norman Goldblatt. Norman wasn’t able to play much basketball, but he has been only a year in the game, and will be able to give the varsity team a solid center place. Forward is a strong position, the team having a fine team of players. Many of the forwards played in the last game of the season, and have been able to come up with a solid team of players.

Max Levy will certainly start the season as a solid forward. The captain of the squad, Max Levy will be a fine addition to the team. He has been a solid forward for many years, and will certainly be able to lead the team to victory.

The team is in good shape, and will certainly be able to give the varsity team a solid team of players.
