New Officers Active

Gershom Stern, president-elect, hailed from Montreal, Canada. He was chairman of the Dormitory Committee last term, in which capacity he brought yachting machines, telephones, and water-fountains to the dormitory residents. Stern is the first and only student member of the Building and Grounds Committee, as well as Business Manager of this year's "Liberty." Y.O.C.'s new Vice-President, Philip Zimmerman, a native New Yorker, was active on the Maslimi and "Commie" fronts in the years preceding his election. As captain of the Y.O.C. Chess Club in the past year, he added to his record of activity for the increased activity of this group.

Secretary-Treasurer

A Irvin Cohen, who won the position of Secretary-Treasurer for the coming year, came to Yad Vashem from Philadelphia. He served last year as Inters-Mural Chairman, and as delegate to the H.L.C.C. He was a member of the Health, Awards, Sports Festival, and Carnival Committee.

From The New Council President

by Gershom Stern

I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to the student faculty and the student officers for selecting my fellow officers and myself to direct student government next year. Your faith gives us additional strength and confidence to successfully complete the work ahead.

In Retrospect

by Leslie Berman

This year has witnessed the renaissance of extra-curricular activities. Student opinion has crystallized. The Loyola Homestake, and the looms have been changed to suit the seen. The whole institution has turned to a new level of civic participation.

In retrospect, the year has shown a great deal of maturing both in the administration and student body. The administration has worked hard to provide a more student-oriented environment, while the student body has taken on more responsibility and leadership.

The Residencia, a favorite target of mine was the concept of synthesis. It took place in a peculiar occasion where the college administration was asked to discuss and understand the farcical ramifications of the events that transpired. In spite of all the explanations and justifications, the main point of the college is that the college is subordinate to the student body and that the goals of the college are not always in the best interest of the students. The administration is often narrow-minded and not willing to listen to the students' concerns.

A related problem is the one of curriculum. When we brought up the question of philosophy and literary analysis, the administration was reluctant to change the curriculum. Our arguments were not considered. The students were more concerned with developing critical thinking skills.

Curricular Changes

When I wrote about the lack of emphasis on Hebrew subjects in the curriculum, the response from the administration was that the students had not made a demand for such courses. In my opinion, the administration should be held accountable for the failure to meet the students' needs.

Diplomacy vs. Truth

This year has been marked by a shift in the administration's approach to students. The administration has moved from a dictatorial style to a more democratic approach, allowing the students to have a greater say in the decision-making process.

The newspapers

The newspaper editor was placed in a peculiar position on the eve of his first issue. He had to be a neutral party in the discussion of the university's policy. After the opening of an employment bureau, he had to decide whether to support or oppose the new policy. He had to weigh the pros and cons of the issue and make a decision that would be fair to all parties.

In conclusion

These events show that we should not be discouraged by the failures we face. The administrator is not always right and the students are not always wrong. We must work together to find solutions to the problems we face.

Lack Of Planning

Yeshiva's Ma'asim

In the spirit of the Jewish Yeshiva colleges, one finds that Yeshiva is unique in its planning. The purpose of a college of Jewish studies is to provide an educational environment where Jewish students can learn and develop a sense of identity and community. Yeshiva provides students with opportunities to explore their religious beliefs, develop their character, and learn about their heritage.

In the above quote, I believe Dean Gershon has emphasized the importance of education in the planning of a college. He stresses the need for an educational institution that provides opportunities for students to explore their religious beliefs, develop their character, and learn about their heritage. This institution, he believes, should be taken into consideration by the educators of Yeshiva.

As an Ideal Student

I agree with Dean Gershon's beliefs. As a student at Yeshiva, I have found that the college provides an ideal environment for learning and growth. The college has a strong sense of community, and the students are encouraged to be active and engaged in all aspects of college life. The college's curriculum is designed to provide a well-rounded education that prepares students for success in all aspects of life.

Yeshiva has a unique approach to education. Unlike other colleges, Yeshiva places a strong emphasis on the study of Jewish texts and the development of character. This approach is unique and effective, and I believe that Yeshiva is an excellent college for students who are interested in pursuing a Jewish education.
On the Sidelines

The hand of fate has reached from the Cosmos and dealt this present an annihilating blow in the form of a sports-affairship. My predecessor, Lord Tyrion, was a progamous-omnipotent and through philosophical reasoning was able to synthesize his position with the realm of hyper-totem thought. I, a poor, earthy renegade, however, am unable to reconcile the invuence of "sportaphilosopher-king" shall indeed be a slow painful process.

I take as my hypothesis that there are sports at Yeshiva. I consider this a "cold strategy" because I have no sports apart from those in the surface of my collegiate career, and I am unharing the power of "sportaphilosopher-king" shall indeed be a slow painful process.

I observe that there are sports at Yeshiva. I consider this a "cold strategy" because I have no sports apart from those in the surface of my collegiate career, and I am unharing the power of "sportaphilosopher-king" shall indeed be a slow painful process.

The observations received any doubts I might have had, "hoopin" were conscientious students and were supported by overwhelming majority of the student body. There was no College of opinion that both men and women I learned that individual competition had added to the prestige of our school. I saw no "leir" or "start leir". All I saw was sports played in the best Yeshiva and Jewish traditions.

So, with an initial sentiment, you new column will appear in bi-weekly boost of reporting and "hoopin" providing leirship with only two things: (1) Pro Hoover orbs, and (2) my client friends shall be there complimentary to uphold the
